JEWISH PEOPLE HONOR HAY.

Most Striking Exercises Ever Held in a Synagogue.

ELIHU ROOT SPEAKS

At the Unveiling and Dedication of a Handsome Memorial Window to John Hay in Keneseth Israel Temple.

THE HAY FAMILY WERE PRESENT

Philadelphia, December 2.—Landed as a diplomat who tempered statecraft with the golden rule, the late John Hay was honored by the Jewish people of this city Sunday, when a handsome memorial window to the dead Secretary of State was unveiled at Keneseth Israel Temple.

Attended by Secretary of State Elihu Root, Oscar Straus, recently named by President Roosevelt as Secretary of Commerce and Labor, and Andrew D. White, ex-Minister to Russia and Germany, together with six members of the Hay family, the exercises were among the most striking ever held in a Jewish synagogue.

The members of the Hay family who were present were Mrs. Payne Whitney and Mrs. James Wadsworth, of New York, daughters of the late Secretary; Clarence Hay, a son; Arthur Hay, of Washington, a nephew, and Mr. and Mrs Samuel Mather, a brother-in-law and sister of Mrs. John Hay.

The consecration address was made by Dr. Joseph Krauskopf, rabbi of the temple. He was assisted in the exercises by Rabbis Berkowitz and Landman.

Secretary Straus made the introductory address, and Mr. White delivered an historical eulogy of the dead statesman. Mr. Root who made the chief address said:

"During John Hay's later years, among the familiar White House scenes of his youth, some incident would evoke a memory of his earlier days and he would tell it to his friends, clad in the felicitous and charming expressions of which he was a master.

"I remember that once as we stood by the door of the old cabinet room, he spoke of the dark and dreadful time when Lincoln was bearing the burden and the sorrow of the Civil war, and feeling his way among innumerable obstacles to his great conclusion of the emancipation of the slave. He told how the great President often in the dead of night gained relief from sleeplessness and restlessness by rising and seeking the chamber of his young assistant private secretary, Mr. Hay, and sitting on the edge of the boy's bed reading to him aloud some favorite book. As the story was told by Mr. Hay we could see the tall, gaunt form in white, walking down the corridor in which he stood, and the rugged careworn face seeking sympathy in the thoughts which might lift up his soul above the turmoil of the days of doubts and distress.

"Doubtless the cold words on the printed page lack power to beat back the invading throng of troubling thoughts and life was given them by the finally sensative appreciate in the noble and ingenious youth.

"The instinct of Lincoln's genius divined a kindred spirit in his young secretary, and therein the silent watches of the night and in days' companionship was moulded and inspired the character of our friend.

"He has lived a noble life, he has fought the good fight as Lincon would have wished, and through the long series of the passing years the spirit of the great emancipator, the strong, the just, the compassionate, has wrought mightily in the work of his great disciple for justice and mercy, for freedom and peace, for the oppressed and forsaken of the earth. So in this temple of our God, who hath made all men in his image," we unveil a memorial set up in honor of one who also gave his life for his country and humaninty."

Modern Punctuation.

By a scandalous shifting of the burden of authority, nobody punctuates any more; it is all thrown upon the printer to do his best. In the art preservative the custon varies. Some offices insert a comma after every fifth word, close punctuation; others after the seventh, which is open, or free, punctuation.

TO SAVE NIAGARA.

People Entering Protest Against Proposed Destruction of the Falls.

Steady progress is being made in the campaign for the preservation of Niagara Falls which is being prosecuting by the American Civic association.

Many letters are being forwarded to Secretary of War Taft every day from all over the country, entering protests from individual citizens against the proposed destruction of the Falls.

Following is an extract from an editorial on the subject which was recently printed in the Springfield (Mass.) Republican:

The American Civic association sends out warning that a new and alarming attack is made on Niagara Falls which endangers all that had apparently been gained for their preservation. The engineer officer appointed by Secretary Taft to report on the facts has joined with the American members of the International Waterways Commission in a recommendation to the secretary to permit the admission of 160,000 electrical horsepower from the Canadian side If Secretary Taft should act favorable on this report the result would be to take from the river above the falls an amount of water equal in connection with the quantity being diverted on the American side to a rapidly running river nearly half a mile wide and eighteen feet deep. This success of the Canadian power companies in getting the help of the engineer and the international commission to defeat the desire for the preservation of the falls, so earnestly expressed by President Roosevelt in his message of last December, shows that commercialism has won the advantage over the people, and there stands nothing in the way of the destruction of the falls excepting the possible veto of Secretary Taft. It all depends on him. * * *

The hearing which is to decide the matter will take place at the office of the secretary of war soon. The decision of the secretary will not, of course, be given immediately but at the best there is not much promise of a fair opportunity for the American people to enter their protest and impress Mr. Taft with their wishes for the preservation of the falls,—it was not intended that there should be. Pocket greed doesn't work that way. * * * Everyone that that does not want to see the American falls drained dry and the who glory of the river irredeemably destroyed should write a personal letters, with their since interest, may have much effect

Mr. Taft will be told unquestionably that there is not likely to be any serious injury to the falls: we even see it said that no serious injury has been done, but none of the thousands who pass the great falls but realizes that it is now exceedingly disfigured by the Canadian companies, who have cut off a great extent of the Horseshoe Falls and thrust a dam 600 feet long into the rapids to get more water, and who have far exceeded American companies in the vulgarization of the gorge with their flumes and their various buildings. Canada and America are already disgraced by their proposed outrage surely out to be prevented. Secretary Taft can prevent it.

An Election Problem.

With every election there are freak bets, queer agreements and ridiculous developments. The most absurd story yet related comes from Minnesota, where the wife of a candidate for county surveyor made him promise that if elected, he would discharge the handsome girl who held the position of bookkeeper in the office. It is recorded that he was elected, and that he kept his promise. This circumstance, at first flush, reveals a weak man and a jealous wife.

If the husband was weak enough to submit to such a demand it is quite probable that he is not strong enough to resist any other unreasonable request that may be made of him. The most charitable supposition is that his wife was afraid to trust him in the society of an attractive woman. Perhaps he had given her cause for this distrust. If so, how can the public be expected to have confidence in him? There are several other ways of looking at the compact and its fulfillment, but from any point of view the man is to be most condemned. Besides, a great wrong may have been done to a competent under official. The woman of the good looks may have met all the requirements of her position, but she had the fatal handicap of beauty. That is something no homely woman can forgive, and therefore we have the deduction that the wife in question was unattractive. After this guessing, however, one is forced back to the same uncertainty that attends the story of "The Lady or the Tiger,"

GILLETTE GUILTY OF MURDER

The Jury Came into the Court Room at 11:15 Tuesday Night

GAVE IT'S DECISION

District Attorney's Speech Caused the Prisoner to Break Down When Dead Girls Letters Were Read.

JURY OUT OVER FIVE HOURS.

Herkimer, N. Y., December 4th.—The case of the state against Chester F. Gillette charged with the murder of Grace Brown, was given to the jury at 5:30 oclock tonight, after Judge Devendorf had occupied an hour and fifteen minutes in his charge.

The day's session, until the judge's charge, had been taken up by District Attorney Ward who described the friendship of Gillette and Grace Brown and their companionship up to the time of the girl's death. For the first time during the trial the youthful prisoner broke down as he was mercilessly scored by the prosecutor.

For some time he glared defiantly at the district attorney, but when the latter read abstracts from the letters sent by Gillette to his sweetheart the prisoner burst into tears and at times throughout the remainder of the session sobbed convulsively.

When the jury went to its room and Gillette was led back to his cell he asked the deputy "are the doors all locked sheriff?" Apparently he feared violence, but there was no evidence of any intention of violence on the part of the big crowd that swarmed the court room. After supper the court room filled quickly and many remained long hoping to witness the return of the jury:

In his charge Judge Devendorf said:

To all concerned this is a case of great importance. You have no right to be influenced or controlled by anything but the evidence as it has been presented to you and the law governing it as given to you by the court. You have no right to permit either sympathy or favor with one or the other to sway your judgement.

"None of us was present on the 11th of June, when it is said this crime occurred. The evidence that Grace Brown lost her life at Big Moose lake admits of no doubt. But there is no testimony on the part of the people as to an eye witness, as to what occurred at the fatal moment, other than the defendant, to detail the last scene in the alleged tragedy. But all evidence is more or less circumstantial, whether consisting of facts which permit the inference of the guilt or whether by an eye witness.

"Gentlemen, evidence is not to be discredited or decried because it is circumstantial. It may often be more reliable evidence than direct evidence.

Something has been said with reference to the motive. Proof of motive of crime is not indispensable or essential to conviction. While a motive may be shown as a circumstance to add in fixing a crime, yet the people are not required to prove a motive. The motive in this case is said by the people to be because of the relations that existed between this man and this girl. Now whether the situation in which he was placed furnished a motive sufficient for him to commit this crime rests with the jury to say.

"I say to you, gentlemen, that I know of no law, in fact there is no law that requires that a defendant should be present at the autopsy or that he should be represented. He has no particular right to be present; in fact he cannot be expected to be a witness. This is not an issue in the case and is not to be considered.

"It was further said by one of the counsel that if every grafter in Herkimer county could be investigated the first thing he would investigate in that regard would be that of the physicians. If there is any graft going on in Herkimer county, that should be presented to the court in proper time and in the proper place. Undoubtedly the physicians called would be paid by the county for their services, the same as all the other officials, and the same as the defendant's counsel.

The judge then touched on the question of the crime and later said:

"If the jury finds that Grace Brown jumped overboard voluntarily and that the defendant made no attempt to rescue her, that does not make him guilty."

The jury retired immediately after the charge was delivered and at 10 o'clock was still out.

GOTTLIEB HAAG.

An Old Resident of Bellefonte Passed Away.

In the death of Gottlieb Haag, which occurred at the Bellefonte Hospital Friday morning at 10:30 o'clock, Bellefonte has lost one of its best known German citizens. The deceased was born in Wittenberg, Mehrstetten, Germany, June 14, 1829, making his age at time of death, 77 years, 5 months and 16 days. He was the son of George Haag. Pennsylvania Society Dinner for Secretary of State Root.

The Pennsylvania society will give a dinner for the Hon. Elihu Root the secretary of state, at the Waldorf-Astoria on Wednesday, December 12th. This will be the eight annual festival of the society. It promises to be by far the largest dinner the society has yet given, the advance subscription already numbering upward of six hundred. The dinner is tendered Secretary Root in recognition of his national services as secretary of state and as a tribute to the brilliant success of his recent notable journey to the republicans of South America. In announcing the dinner the committee points out that the dinner in 1905 was in honor of the bicentenary of the birth of Benjamin Franklyn and that there would be a peculiar propriety in following this festival for the greatest of early American diplomats with one to a statesman who, succeeding Franklin in the great work of American diplomacy, has done so much to increase the prestige of this country abroad.

Shot a White Deer.

A rare specimen of American deer, known as the white deer or Albino, was killed by Solomon Kinley on Coal mountain, Lycoming county, last week. The animal was a doe and proved an easy shot for the well experienced hunter. He took the carcass to his home along Bottle run, where he will exhibit it to all who call within the next few days. The Albino is a very rare specimen of deer and few have been killed in this section of the country. This doe was practically of a pure white color with the exception of its ears and face, which were more like the natural color of the deer. Mr. Kinley is very proud of his rare luck.

Fulton—Daley.

On Friday evening at 7 o'clock a very pretty wedding was celebrated at the Catholic parsonage on East Bishop street. The contracting parties were Walter Fulton of State College and Miss Katie Daley a daughter of William Daley of East Lamb street. The ceremony was performed by Rev. P. McAdle. The best man was Edward Daley, a brother of the bride, and the bridesmaid was Miss Katie Murray. The happy couple departed on the 8:16 train Friday night for a short wedding tour and returned home Sunday afternoon. The groom is an employee of Lingle's foundry.

CONGRESS IN SESSION

Took House an Hour and Senate Fifteen Minutes to get Ready

SENATOR PENROSE ASKS

For an Inquiry Into the Discharge of the Negro Troops of the 25th Infantry—Many Bills to be Considered

USUAL COMMITTEE WAS APPOINTED

Washington, December 3.—The fifty-ninth congress began its last session at noon today. It took the senate fifteen minutes to arrange its preliminaries and the house of representative an hour. The senate received from President Roosevelt a long list of appointments for its confirmation in an executive session of nineteen minutes decided that as the nominations had been received before the body had been organized formally to make no confirmations until the president's annual message had been received and the session fairly started.

Senators Penrose, of Pennsylvania, and Foraker, of Ohio, came forward with resolutions of inquiry regarding the discharge of the negro troops of the Twenty-fifth infantry. One was addressed to the president and the other to the secretary of war. After the ripple of surprise had passed and Vice President Fairbanks had suggested that it was unusual to transact any business until the president's message had been received the resolutions "went over" by unanimous consent.

Senator Dupont, of Delaware, took the oath of office.

The opening of the two houses was witnessed by an animated throng which filled the galleries to their capacity. Hundreds went away disappointed in not gaining admission to witness the session of either senate or house.

Not in years has a larger number of members-elect of the lower house of congress presented themselves at the speaker's desk to the oath of office. Death has been unusually active among the membership during the closing days of the last session and the beginning of the present and Chaplain Couden feelingly called the attention of the body to the work of the grim reaper during the months since adjournment.

Speaker Cannon appointed Representative James R. Mann, of Illinois, as a member of the board of regents of the Smithsonian institute, vice Robert R. Hitt, of Illinois, deceased.

The galleries of the house were crowded at an early hour. The absence of flowers from the desks of the members was much commented on, but the order of the speaker prohibiting the floral display was generally commended for its good sense. A similar rule was made in the senate two years ago.

Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, daughter of the president, occupied a seat in the executive gallery, accompanied by Miss Hagner, the social secretary to the wife of the president.

The routine work of the house incident to the opening day was quickly dispatched, the roll call showing nearly 300 members present.

Representative Bark Cockran of New York, who recently married Miss Ide, was the subject of hearty laughter when his personal request that he be permitted to absent himself for an indefinite period on account of business, was laid before the house by the speaker.

After the appointment of the usual committee to wait upon the president and inform him that the house was organized and ready to receive any communication he might desire to make of interest to the public service, the house adjourned out of respect to the memory of the deceased members.

Be a Jolly Jap

We may have with Japan in twenty years from now—or maybe forty. Don't let that worry you. Be a Jap yourself next Sunday and see how it feels. A fine colored falseface of a Jap soldier given with the New York World next Sunday. The kind of falseface you would buy from a store. Don't forget—a Jap falseface next Sunday.

RICHARD DOWNING DIES.

Former President of the Bellefonte and Snow Shoe Railroad.

Richard H. Downing, a prominent member of the Society of Friends, and a man widely known in business circles, died at his home, 1613 Race Street Philadelphia, Saturday morning, following a stroke of apoplexy on Wednesday. He was very well known to residents of Bellefonte and Centre county through large business interests here, having been associated in business enterprises with the late Daniel Rhoads. Sunday's Philadelphia Press gives the following sketch of his life.

He was born near Downingtown, February 22, 1825, the son of Israel Downing and Lydia Ashbridge Thomas. He was educated in Chester County schools and when 20 years of age came to this city. In 1861 he engaged in the coal business in Centre County and afterwards became president of the Bellefonte and Snow Shoe Railroad, remaining there until the road was absorbed by the Pennsylvania Railroad. At the time of his death Mr. Downing was a director of the Bank of North America, the Westmoreland Insurance Company and other corporations. Mr. Downing was a life member of the Union League and was one of that organizations' oldest living members. He also was a member of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, the Horticultural Society and the Franklin Institute. He is survived by a widow and one daughter, Mrs. John G. Bullock, of Germantown. Another daughter, Mrs. J. Francke Rumney, died a few years ago.

The Little Maid.

Roy Shacklethorp and I were chums at college, and I felt a certain pride in the association because he had the reputation of being the handsomest, the brightest and most popular fellow in school. His popularity was not, of course, confined to the school, for he was welcomed wherever he went, and was a great favorite with ladies, especially the younger ones. His one fault, or at least, the only one I was able to discover, was the ease with which he would allow himself to drift into the affaire du coeur without any thought for what the consequences might be to the young lady. If matters began to take a serious turn he would break it off and express to me the greatest remorse, but in a week or two would commence another flirtation with a seemingly clear conscience. Though it may seem strange, I am convinced that he himself was utterly incapable of experiencing the grandest of human passions, and that may account for his actions, though it certainly does not excuse them. During the latter part of the senior year he spent several Sundays in succession in one of the little country places near K——, where the college is located. Suddenly the visits ceased, and for several days thereafter his studies were neglected and his face wore a most dejected expression. I knew pretty well what that meant and proceeded to take him to task as I always did, though it never did the least particle of good. He had refused breakfast that morning and kept his room on plea of illness. When I came in he was dressed and had his suit case packed.

"So," I began, "you are going away for a week to have a good time and forget it. I think you ought to be very much ashamed of yourself."

"See here, Colwell, if you can't be decent to a fellow who is sick," he did look bad, "you can leave the room."

"I shall stay right here till I've said all I want to say, I'm glad you're sick," which was a lie, "and don't think you are getting half you deserve"—which was the truth.

He was so very contrite that I felt my heart softening in spite of myself. I smiled a little grimly.

"Go on. That sounds natural."

"But it isn't natural. It's different this time"—of course!—"and it's worse far worse."

"It's a long story."

"Not very," I suggested. "It couldn't be. Not more than five weeks long, or possibly six."

"If that were all!"

"Well, isn't it?" I asked.

"I hope so, Jack, I hope so but I am afraid the story is only begun. She is unlike any girl I have ever seen." I waited for him to go on. "The people down there call her 'The little maid,' and everybody loves her. She is beautiful, Jack. But I don't think that is the reason. She is good, too, but it isn't altogether that." He paused for a moment.

"Oh, Roy, it's the same story!"

"I sought her society, and when—I found out—I wasn't man enough to leave her at once. If it had been any other girl it would have been easy, but she attracted me, and I imagined myself in love with her."

"Did you tell her so?"

"No, but I acted it, and she, poor little thing—"

"Roy Shacklethorp!" I exclaimed, rising to my feet and preparing to quit the room, "you are an infernal scoundrel!"

We made it up afterward, for, incredible as it may seem, I knew that he would never deliberately harm any one, and I really loved the boy.

After the course was completed we drifted apart, though we corresponded semi-occasionally, and in about a year I received an invitation to his wedding. Accompanying it was a letter in which he said:—

"Do you remember 'the little maid,' Jack? Sometimes I wish I had married her, though God knows I am not worthy, for she would have helped me to make the most of myself. As it is, my wife—that is to be—will be able to help me in another way, for she has what most people so desironsly seek after—wealth."

I did not attend the wedding. Eight or ten months later I was visiting a friend of father's who lived in Boington, a quaintly pretty little village. I arrived on Saturday, and on Sunday attended church with the family, for in Boington any one who does not frequent divine service is regarded with suspicion. I tried to fix my mind on the sermon, but it was insufferably tedious and the effort proved futile. Then I found myself looking around at the many faces in the room till my eyes rested on one that held me spellbound.

Magnificent, dreamy eyes; an oval face framed with wavy brown hair that caught the sunshine; sensitive finely curved lips. Surely she was beautiful, but it was the pure soul of the girl, expressing itself in every feature, which attracted me irresistibly. After the service was over I managed to get an introduction to Miss Dorothy Rockfort—that was her name—and an invitation to call, I accepted it the very next day, and found her at home. What we said I do not know, but I do know that then and there I fell in love with the sweetest girl in the world. I called whenever I could make an excuse, and when the excuse was lacking chance favored me and I met her elsewhere.

If I hadn't been such a blind fool I must have seen that she was utterly indifference for reserve. I hadn't been there a week before I had asked her to be my wife and—she refused me kindly, of course, and with pity for my disappointment. Disappointment did I say? Goodness! Is that the word to express the madness, the agony I endured? I pleaded with her, I begged of her to give me time and perhaps she would learn to love me, unless—The thought came like a sudden blow. Could it be that she had already given her love to some one more worthy than I? She did not deny it, and, perhaps because she thought it best for me to tell some one, she told me all. It was not much, but I forgot my own suffering, and the thought of the lonely years to come, in sympathy for what she endured and anger at the wretch who was the cause. Sometime before she had met a man, accomplished, fascinating, who had sought and won her affections and then left her without a word. She had never seen him since, and yet, such is the sublime faith of woman, she still believed he would return to her.

I was deeply thankful for the confidence she placed in me, and the bond of sympathy sprung up between us which I prized as some sort of compensation. One afternoon we were sitting out doors on the old fashioned, vine-covered veranda, and she was reading to me from a book of poems. She had a beautiful voice, soft and well modulated, and I was content to live in the present, and forget. She kept her eyes fixed on the book and did not see what I saw a man coming slowly up the road on a bicycle, who looked familiar. I watched him till he came opposite the house toward which he was looking, but evidently without any intention of stopping. With a start I recognized him. It was Roy Shacklethorp I sprang to my feet and called to him "Shacklethorp!"

Dorothy heard me, looked toward the street, and every vestige of color left her face. I went hastily to her side, thinking she was ill.

"It is he," she whispered, "he has come back."

Then I understood—and on the instant my very soul was transformed with the blackness of hatred and rage. The revelation came like a nightmare that held me powerless, and for that I thank God, for there was murder in my heart. I struggled to speak—it was too cruel to see the look of joy that illuminated her dear face and to know of the despair that must come afterwards. He had dismounted and was coming toward her. They did not heed me, Dorothy rose to meet him, and held out her hand with gentle dignity not seeming to observe his embarrassment.

"You are welcome, Mr. Shacklethorp. When did you come?"

"We—we came last night."

"Oh! you have a friend!"

He straightened himself with a supreme effort at self-command, but did not meet her eyes. I felt myself choking.

"It is my wife," he said.

The Best Guaranty of Merit Is Open Publicity.

Every bottle of Dr. Pierce's world-famed medicines leaving the great laboratory at Buffalo, N. Y., has printed upon its wrapper all the ingredients entering into its composition. This fact alone places Dr. Pierce's Family Medicines in a class all by themselves. They cannot be classed with patent or secret medicines because they are neither. This is why so many unprejudiced physicians prescribe them and recommend them to their patients. They know what they are composed of, and that the ingredients are those endorsed by the most eminent medical authorities.

The further fact that neither Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the great stomach tonic, liver invigorator, heart regulator and blood purifier, nor his "Favorite Prescription" for weak, overworked, broken-down, nervous women, contains any alcohol, also entitles them to a place all by themselves.

Many years ago, Dr. Pierce discovered that chemically pure glycerine, of proper strength, is a better solvent and preservative of the medicinal principles residing in our indigenous, or native, medicinal plants than is alcohol; and, furthermore, that it possesses valuable medicinal properties of its own, being demulcent, nutritive, antiseptic, and a most efficient antiferment.

Neither of the above medicines contains alcohol, or any harmful, habit-forming drug, as will be seen from a glance at the formula printed on each bottle wrapper. They are safe to use and potent to cure.

Not only do physicians prescribe the above, non-secret medicines largely, but the most intelligent people employ them—people who would not think of using the ordinary patent, or secret medicines. Every ingredient entering into the composition of Dr. Pierce's medicines has the strongest kind of an endorsement from leading medical writers of the several schools of practice. No other medicines put up for like purposes has any such professional endorsement.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. Constipation is the cause of many diseases. Cure the cause and you cure the disease. One "Pellet" is a gentle laxative, and two a mild cathartic. Druggists sell them, and nothing is "just as good." Easy to take as candy.

AN AUTOMOBILE BANK

Large Safe Run on Wheels by New York Institution.

WELL GUARDED AGAINST THIEVES

Both Chauffeur and Messenger on Money Wagon Are Armed—Ingenious Contrivances to Outwit Thieves—The Plan is to Save Depositors the Trouble of Going to the Teller, Especially at Night.

A bank on wheels is the latest thing in New York, a bank that goes to the people to collect their money instead of waiting for depositors to walk up and leave it, says the New York Times.

The Night and Day bank, at Fifth avenue and Forty-fourth street, has started this new way of doing things. The other night it put in force a collection system by which its depositors are saved the trouble of visiting the bank and are enabled to deposit all the money on hand at a late hour at night without the risk of sending it to the bank by messenger.

To make the collections the bank officials have had built a specially designed automobile with a limousine body. Taking up the greater part of the space in the body of the machine is a large safe, built into the automobile so that it cannot be removed. There are no side doors, entrance only being possible to the section containing the safe by a front door next to the chauffeur's seat. The mechanism is so constructed that it is impossible for any one but a chauffeur who has learned the plan to operate it, obviating the possibility of a band of thieves knocking the driver on the head and running off with the automobile, safe and all.

Each depositor who desires to have his money taken to the bank by the collectors receives a metal dispatch box, numbered and inclosed in a leather case. In this he puts his currency and checks, and when the machine comes around he turns the box, locked, over to the messenger, who gives him a receipt for the box, "contents unknown." On the stub of the duplicate receipt which the messenger is to take back to the bank is a memorandum of the box's contents.

There are but two keys to each box, the customer having one and the receiving teller the other. When the messenger gets the box he drops it into a slit in the automobile safe, and as the safe is built like a letter box the deposit boxes cannot be removed save by some one knowing the combination of the safe. At the bank the boxes are taken out and the receipts checked off with the deposit slip that has been locked in the box. On the next trip the box and the pass book are returned to the depositor.

Eventually collections will be made from Fourteenth street north to One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street, so that the Night and Day bank will be able to get closer to depositors in a larger territory than any other similar institution in New York. The collecting automobile will follow regular routes, starting at 3 o'clock, making a trip among the large stores at 5, a visit to the theater box offices between 9 and 10 p. m. and picking up possibly all the small change that has been left in the large restaurants between midnight and 1 o'clock.

Since the Night and Day bank started it has been found that a number of depositors were a little chary of sending large sums to the bank after dark, especially from some distance. The automobile, the officials think, will effectually overcome this difficulty.

The machine is also designed to overcome a still greater difficulty which besets merchants who have heavy weekly payrolls, necessitating the drawing of large sums in cash at one time. With the new "wagon," as they call the automobile at the bank, it will only be necessary for a well known customer to telephone to the bank the number of one dollar bills, the number of twos, and so on, that he wants, and the full amount will be made up by the teller, locked in a box and delivered within a very few minutes at the customer's office or store, where his check will be accepted, providing he has been depositing long enough for his signature to be known. In this way the necessity of sending clerks to the bank in a cab every Saturday morning will be done away with and greater safety will be obtained. The chauffeur and the messenger who ride in the money "wagon" are both armed, and the bank officials feel sure that there is no chance of the machine being held up on its rounds. Even if thieves did get into the bank officials say they could get at the money.

The Pace of Admiralty.

It is reported that Japan will see the Dreadnought and go Great Britain 3,000 tons better, laying down a battleship of 23,000 tons service displacement. Of course the mistress of the seas will not ignore the challenge, and we must prepare to hear of a British battleship of 26,000 tons, says the Boston Transcript. The Japanese, being a proud and progressive people, will not sit still and may be counted on to push the building mark on their side up to 29,000 tons. By that time our own big ship enthusiasts will wake up, and the taxpayers will be invited to contribute the cash for a floating fortress of 32,000 tons. So does the race for naval supremacy go, the mind of the competing world being at present fixed upon displacement as if there was no other factor to be taken into account.

BUYING CHRISTMAS GIFTS.

Useful Hints For Working Girls to Follow.

"The girl who works for her living does have a hard time gathering up her Christmas gifts unless she has a fine head for organization and knows where to shop," says Anna Steese Richardson in the Woman's Home Companion for December. "The first thing to remember is that the Christmas bargain counter is the dumping ground of the shrewd merchant. He tosses here all the left overs from last year's unsalable stock. For this counter he buys up old wholesale stocks, auction lots and factory ends. Nobody knows the failings of the bargain counter shopper better than does this shrewd merchant. And he makes 50 instead of 5 per cent on every sale. Everything is mussy, and colors are garish. Moths have eaten into this, and dust has settled on that. But the woman who tries to shop against time does not notice these defects.

"The later you shop the more important it is that you go to a good store. Girls who work downtown should leave home half an hour earlier, go to a first class shop, tell the clerk frankly just how much they can spend, and unless my measure of the clerk in the first class store is wrong they will be waited on promptly and satisfactorily. But if you know you have only $1.50 to spend on a nouveau art pin for your chum's belt do not waste the clerk's time and yours looking at ten or fifteen dollar pins. Be as businesslike in your shopping as you are in the performance of your office duties and you will reap the reward of good and the blessings of the unhappy clerks."

SCHOOLGIRL HAZING.

Search For "Coign" In Molasses and Take "Poison."

In a report to the Chicago board of education Superintendent Cooley of the public schools tells of the initiation stunts high school girls of one society compel members to undergo, says a Chicago special dispatch to the New York World. Here is the list, with high school spelling:

Bend forward, hands touching floor without bending knees, a hundred times.
Break egg on her head.
Search for coign in molasses.
Search for coign in flour.
Eat unpleasant things.
Pour water down sleeve.
Take poison.
Walk on corn or walk in molasses.
Let candle grease drip on her hand.
Brand her tongue.
Brand her hands with india ink.

Superintendent Cooley said, "I know of the case of a high school boy who had to go through a series of stunts much more outrageous than the list of girl tortures as a part of his initiation into a high school fraternity."

BEAR SCARE FOR FARMERS.

Armed Guards at Schoolhouse and Grand Hunt Planned.

Ferocious bears are terrorizing the residents of the Blaine school district near Altoona, Pa., says the New York World. Calves and pigs are killed nightly in the raids of the beasts, and in several instances children have been chased. Armed with shotguns and rifles, the fathers and hired men are escorting the children to and from school, fearing that the little ones may be killed by the bears, which are becoming bolder each day. An armed guard is kept stationed at the little schoolhouse, the farmers taking their turn at doing guard duty.

An organized bear hunt, to be participated in by the residents of the adjoining districts, is planned as the only way in which the dangerous animals can be exterminated or driven back to the mountains.

A Christmas Conceit In Pastry.

Christmas wreaths are a dainty, sweet conceit for this season of the year, says Fannie Merritt Farmer in Woman's Home Companion for December. They are made of a simple meringue mixture, which, if one chooses, may be shaped in a variety of ways. Sometimes I add a third of a cupful of shredded cocoanut or chopped nut meats to give a variety. Beat the white of four eggs until stiff and add gradually while beating constantly two-thirds of a cupful of fine granulated sugar and continue the beating until the mixture will hold its shape. Cut and fold in one-third of a cupful of fine granulated sugar and flavor with half a teaspoonful of vanilla. Shape in wreaths, using a pastry bag and tube, on a wet board covered with letter paper. Ornament with angelica and red candies to represent holly leaves and berries. Bake thirty minutes in a slow oven and remove from the paper, using a sharp, long bladed knife. Unless one has a very correct eye it is well to have a guide for shaping these rings. Mark circles on the letter paper with a lead pencil, using a doughnut cutter for a pattern.

Novelty In Hotels.

A unique hotel which, owing to its slender shape, is called the Toothpick is being erected in San Francisco. It was being put up at the time of the earthquake, and the steel skeleton was uninjured. Now, instead of finishing the walls with stone and brick, as was first intended, great plates of boiler iron will be riveted on, just as the armor of battleships is. The steel plates strengthen the structure of the building, it is said, cannot be shaken off and present a smooth surface for painting.

SHOOPANG SALAD A FAD.

Chinese Minister Shows Washington Society How to Make It.

Washington society has a new fad, according to a special dispatch to the Chicago Record-Herald. It is the preparation of shoopang, or chrysanthemum salad, according to a recipe furnished by the Chinese minister. Chrysanthemum salad is "food for the gods," the piece de resistance of oriental banquets, and under the guidance of Sir Chentung Liang Cheng society misses and matrons are preparing the favorite dish of the gastronomers of the Flowery Kingdom. Here is the recipe for the mysterious dish:

Twenty-four selected hearts of the shoopang or Chinese chrysanthemum.
Twelve "fish wings," collops from the flanks of the moy wen, or sunfish.
Two broiler chickens.
Four young pigeons.
Cutlets from three lobsters.
Bake the fish with flavoring of ki liong, a spice resembling saffron.
Broil the fowl with a flavoring of bood, another Chinese herb.

Then steam all ingredients together for three-quarters of an hour with a strong infusion of the woy flower and serve with garnishing of Chinese greens. The woy flower may be omitted, as it is very pungent and not agreeable to some American palates, though highly prized by the Chinese.

Although called a salad, the shoopang is a formidable dish and in the proportions given is enough for eight persons. It is primarily intended for the principal course of a banquet. It is possible to prepare it in a chafing dish, but a Mongolian cook seems to be essential for a successful concoction. Those who have tasted the salad pronounce it delicious. Many of the ingredients cannot be obtained outside of Chinatown, and the high prices of most of them place the dish beyond the reach of the ordinary household.

DAWN OF A NEW RELIGION.

No Throne Above, No Beyond, Says Professor Schmidt of Cornell.

Professor Nathaniel Schmidt of the Cornell department of Semitic languages and oriental history preached in the Unitarian church at Ithaca the other morning, says the New York World.

The speaker declared that a new religion was approaching, in which is a deeper insight into nature and a deepening of the moral sense. Christianity has failed to adapt itself to the spiritual needs of man, he said. The new religion will meet all these. It will be universal, covering all times and peoples.

The supernatural in religion is foolishness, he declared. There is no throne above in the new faith, and the idea of a beyond can have no place. We are all denizens of the universe. The mind must progress. Away with formulas and creeds! Put them into a museum, as a thing to be studied.

Voters Subpoenaed In Election Fraud.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 23.—The three election judges named Steiner, Cohen and Michaels, in the First precinct of Jefferson ward, in the recent city elections, accused by John A. Selph, defeated candidate for the city council, of fraud in conection with the election, after being adjudged guiltless by the Democratic executive committee, were arraigned in the hustings court to face charges brought against them by the grand jury. Practically every voter in the precinct has been subpoenaed to testify.

Journalism in the South.

Down in South Carolina a society editor of one of the papers in that state produced the following account of a wedding:

"Miss Jennie Jones and Bob Henry were married at the Jones mansion last night. The bride is the daughter of our constable. Jones, who made a good officer, and will undoubtedly be re-elected next spring. He offers a fine horse for sale in another column. The groom runs a grocery store on Main street, and is a good patron of our advertising columns, and has a good line of bargains this week. All the summer he paid two cents more for butter than any other store in town. The happy couple left on the 10 o'clock train for Milwaukee to visit the bride's uncle, who is reported to have lots of money and Bright's disease. Bob certainly has an eye for business."

For completeness of details in regard to the parties interested it would be difficult to beat this item.

THE above picture of the man and fish is the trade-mark of Scott's Emulsion, and is the synonym for strength and purity. It is sold in almost all the civilized countries of the globe.

If the cod fish became extinct it would be a world-wide calamity, because the oil that comes from its liver surpasses all other fats in nourishing and life-giving properties. Thirty years ago the proprietors of Scott's Emulsion found a way of preparing cod liver oil so that everyone can take it and get the full value of the oil without the objectionable taste. Scott's Emulsion is the best thing in the world for weak, backward children, thin, delicate people, and all conditions of wasting and lost strength.

GOOD IN PRICKLY PEAR

Valuable as an Alcohol and Beef Producer.

PORTABLE STILLS BEING MADE

Texas Owners of Cactus Lands Figuring on a Big Revenue From Plants Formerly Considered a Nuisance—With Spines Burned Off They Make Good Butter Producing Feed. Cattle Like Them, and They Fatten Steers Rapidly.

In portions of West Texas and over a great deal of south and southwest Texas the prickly pear has long been regarded as an unmitigated nuisance, although during seasons of drought the ranchmen have found it a very good cattle food after the spines are removed by burning.

Since the impetus given the making of denatured alcohol it is claimed that there is a bonanza to be reaped from these cactus lands of Texas as a material for manufacturing alcohol, and at several points in west Texas arrangements are being made to soon begin work with portable stills, which will be moved around in the cactus region as the supply diminishes, says a Fort Worth (Tex.) correspondent of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Owners of this cactus land are figuring on some big revenue when the alcohol making begins, and it is an experiment that is being watched with much interest throughout the state.

The feeding of this prickly pear to stock has also been given a new impetus in consequence of some experiments that have recently been made and the boost given the idea by the federal authorities at Washington. As a result of careful experiments it has been shown that a ration producing between one and a quarter and one and a half pounds of butter per day costs about 13 cents when pear, rice, bran and cottonseed meal are fed.

Although prickly pear is low in nutritive value from the chemical standpoint, the steer feeding experiment also shows that there is abundant justification for the practices in vogue of preparing cattle for market upon prickly pear and cottonseed meal. A gain of one and three-quarters pounds per day at an expense of 3½ cents per pound compares favorably with the feeding results obtained from standard feeds.

Two experiments have recently been undertaken, both conducted under the immediate supervision of ranchmen in southern Texas in co-operation with the bureau of plant industry at Washington. The first test was undertaken by Alexander Sinclair of San Antonio. The second was conducted by T. A. Coleman upon his ranch at Encinal.

There are two species of the prickly pear recognized in that portion of Texas where the plant flourishes. One is small and prostrate and of no special value. The other has at least two forms, one with yellow spines and the other with spines red or brown at the base. There is also another variety found in south Texas and known as the blue pear.

The cows selected for this experiment were secured from the Sinclair herd. They were Holstein-Jersey stock. During the feeding period the cows were kept in separate pens and under separate sheds and were allowed to remain in the sheds or roam in the pens at will. One load of pears was sufficient for a week's feed, and at feeding time the material was placed in a box and chopped with a spade into convenient size for the animals to eat. The grain was fed at milking time, and a ration of roughage, consisting of pears or sorghum or hay, was fed three times a day. Pears were always fed after milking morning and evening and about midday. It was the purpose during the entire period to feed all the pears the cows would eat.

It has been found impossible at this time to make an estimate that is at all reliable regarding the cost of this item of the ration. The rancher gathers the pears upon his land as he would firewood; hence it costs him nothing. The cost of the other items of the ration is as follows: Cottonseed meal, $22 per ton; rice bran, $13 per ton; sorghum hay, $7 per ton. One man can easily burn pears for 100 cows, and in addition thereto he can assist in the milking. He will use about ten gallons of gasoline each day in burning the spines off of the cactus, and during the time this experiment was in progress the price of this commodity was 12 cents per gallon. The cost of a day's rations for each cow, while pears without hay were being fed, was 13 cents.

The conclusion at Washington is that the Texas cattle raiser has a very cheap feed at hand if he will only give the matter the proper attention. Many ranchmen in that section of the state have provided themselves with pear burners, as they are called, which can be moved around over the pear producing area and the spines burned off the plant as it is gathered. The slight scorching given the plant during the spine burning process does not seem to affect the taste, for cattle eat it with avidity, and it is apparent that had it not been for the spines on this plant the cattle would have long since wiped it out of existence.

VERDICT CORONER'S JURY.

The verdict of the jury of inquest on the death of Mr. Dale was returned to the Coroner Saturday. No additional testimony was taken since Tuesday, 13th inst., the day the jury was impaneled, although much evidence might have been obtained, and possibly sufficient to warrant the arrest of a party held under suspicion.

The verdict as delivered, except the signatures, is as follows:

COMMONWEALTH OF PENNA. } ss
COUNTY OF CENTRE }

An inquisition taken at Centre Hall, in the county aforesaid, the thirteenth day of November, A. D., 1906, before Dr. Philip Fisher, Coroner of the county aforesaid, upon view of the body of Josiah C. Dale, then and there lying dead, upon the solemn oaths, respectively of Morris Runkle, S. W. Smith, G. W. Hosterman, James W. Runkle, G. Ruhman and John L. Arney, of the county aforesaid, charged to inquire on the part of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, when, where and by what means the Josiah C. Dale came to his death, who upon their respective oaths do say that it appears from the view of the body and from the evidence produced before them, that the said Josiah C. Dale came to his death on the evening of the twelfth day of November, A. D, 1906, from a gunshot wound inflicted by hands of some person unknown to said jury.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, as well the said Coroner, as the said jurors, have to this inquisition set their hands and seals, on the day and year and at the place first above mentioned.

EMPTY SHELL FOUND.

An empty shell was picked up at a point where the murder of Mr. Dale might have been committed. It is a No. 12 New Rival Of course, an empty shell might be picked up almost anywhere, especially this season of the year, but the particular shell was found might make it of more than ordinary importance

SHOOTING ALONG MOUNTAIN.

Since the Dale tragedy, at least for a week thereafter, guns were fired along Nittany Mountain in the evening to about correspond with the time it is supposed the Dale murder took place. By some it is thought these shots were fired to make it appear that the shooting along the mountain after dark, is nothing unusual, thus to discredit the belief that the shot fired about six o'clock Monday evening, November 12th, in the vicinity of Adam's road was fired by a murderer.—Centre Reporter.

The Maccabee Dutch Banquet.

The Maccabee meeting on Wednesday night with the "Dutch Banquet and turkey raffle adjunct at the Undine Hall was a great success. Several new members were taken in being about sixty-five members in attendance. Five turkeys and two watch fobs were raffled off. Sauer krout and wieners were the principal parts of the Bill of Fare with mashed potatoes, cheese sandwiches, ham and tongue and all the extras that go with them. Cigars and pipes were passed around and a smoker held until midnight.

A prize contest is going to be held during months of December and January for new members. The low charter fee is still open and several of the merchant members in town have contributed making a nice prize list for those who hustle for the new members. The next meeting will be held on Dec, 5.

The United Thanksgiving Service

For more than a generation, favored with the privilege of enjoying my residence in Bellefonte, never have I seen a more sunny, cheery and gladsome Thanksgiving Day than was the one of Thursday 1906.

For obvious reasons, I have always arranged matters of business and pleasure so as to be at home on this important day. It is to me an occasion for thankfulness to report that not less than five of our churches were represented at the united Thanksgiving service in St. John's Reformed church Thursday. The room was fully filled with a much interested and edified audience. Seven preachers were seated on the platform pulpit evidently very happy, "Laborers together with God." One of the women auditors said to me, "I was so glad to see insomuch that I kept looking at them through the entire service." This being the experience of one, what must be the estimated gladness of all combined who were there?

The amount of the united free will offerings received on this special occasion for, perhaps, the most worthy, if not the most needful object was $24.00

"There is that scattereth and yet increaseth; there is that withholdeth more than is meet and it tendeth to poverty."

In his proclamation, President Roosevelt most wisely reminding us, let we forget, he said "Let us beware lest our abounding blessings become a curse, and a destruction instead of salvation."

A united service bringing together the various religious denominations of our little city, what shall it be? That there should be such an assemblage and one beneficial in the highest degree, all right minded people in our town will agree. Not being a pastor, rector or priest; only a missioner, one of the least of the Lord's servants, I can suggest nothing just now more needful, fitting and timely than a day of public fasting and prayer with praise. The appointment and arrangements therefor I must leave with those in higher authority and position than I am.

In New Hands.

The Nittany inn has again changed landlords. The new proprietor is Hon. Philip Foster a former successful hotel man, and it is his intention to place the inn on a more substantial basis and cater to the transient trade Mr Foster no doubt will be successful in his new quarters. The inn is one of the most finely appointed hostelries in the state and far superior to any hotel in many towns whose population far exceeds that of State College.

Woman's Work.

The quiet fidelity with which a woman will dishwash her life away for her husband and children is a marvel of endurance. Here is the servitude of women heaviest, no sooner is work done than it requires to be done again. Men takes jobs, work on them, finish them and they are over for good and all. The prospect of ending them and drawing pay for the labor is alluring, but no such allurements are held out for the wife. She washes Monday after Monday the same garments until there is nothing more of them to wash; then they are replaced by others of new material just like them, and the rubbing and wringing goes on forever. She mends the stockings with tireless fidelity, the same holes meeting her gaze week after week, for if there is a "darned" place in a sock "he" invariably puts his irrepressible toe through it. Every morning the rooms are put in order, only to be in the wildest disorder by time night falls. There are no jobs, each one different, no terms, no pay. The same socks, the same washing, the same room every time.

MAKES DENIAL OF STATEMENT

Warren Contradicts Agent Meyendorff's Affidavit

ENTRY OF COAL LANDS

Never Read Any Private Letters of his to the Man Nor has Any Knowledge of Them

BY REQUEST THE TWO MEN MET

Washington, November, 30th.—Senator Warren, who arrived in the city today, made the following statement in contradiction of the affidavits of Special Agent Mevendorff, of the general land office, made yesterday at Salt Lake City, in which Mr. Warren and his colleague, Senator Clark, with conspiring with others to put a stop to investigations into charges made in connection with the entry of coal lands owned by the Union Pacific Railroad company:

"If Myendorff made such an affidavit, he must have been indulging in pipe dreams. I am informed that Senator Clark never saw the man and never had any communication with him oral or written.

"The idea of Senator Clark needing Mydendorff's assistance in his re-election is absured, as Wyoming was practically solid for him and no candidate opposing.

"As for myself, I never knew that such a man as Special Agent Myendorff existed until some time late in 1903 or 1904, when I received a letter from him saying that he wished to see me, that he had heard that somebody had been writing to his discredit, and asking if I would not let him know when I was in Cheyenne or Denver so that he might call; that we were brother soldiers of the civil war, etc., etc.

"In accordance with the request, I some months afterward informed him that I expected to be in Denver a few days later sending him the date. He called at my hotel, asked that I help to get him promotion to the position of special agent in charge, or a place in the consular service, because neither his work nor the climate of Colorado entirely agreed with him. that the altitude there made him nervous, etc. He based his request to me on the grounds of his civil war record, his friendship for my friends, Mark Hanna, Elmer Dover and others. He appealed strongly to my sympathy and I consented to mention his case to his superiors. He then volunteered the information that he had a lot of irregular and illegal coal claim cases made by parties in Colorado for land in Wyoming said to be in the interest of the Union Pacific Coal company. He asked my advice how to proceed. I suggested that he follow the law and his instructions.

"I never read Myendorff any private letters of his to Commissioner Richards and have no knowledge that such ever existed.

"On a later occasion when I happened to be in Denver on business, Mydendorff again called on me, and again solicited my assistance. I think he called on me once afterward at my committee room in Washington, but I had no conversation with him beyond the customary salutation I would extend to any visitor of my acquaintance. Some time afterward I read in the Denver newspapers of Mydenorff's sensational attempt to commit sucide and later on that he had left Denver, and so I do not know whether or not he ever received the coveted promotion."

Things to Quit.

Grumbling.

Saying fate is against you.

Going around with a gloomy face.

Talking big things and doing small ones.

Boast of what you can do instead of doing it.

Talking continually about yourself and your affairs.

Depreciating yourself and making light of your abilities.

Comparing yourself with others to disagreeable experiences.

Why Not Smile?

Have you tried smiling? It is the latest remedy for all the ills of the flesh and the spirit, and it is cheap. All that is necessary to do to try the new "smile cure," which, we are informed, the London doctors are recommending, is to lift the corners of the mouth slightly by means of the facial muscles, expanding the lips and showing the teeth. Practice this before the looking glass night and morning until the smile has worn in, and the beneficial results will be forthcoming, it is seriously asserted. There is no state of affairs so discouraging that it can't be bettered by smiling over it. If you have trouble, bear it and grin—smile and smile till the smile grows in!

EARLE C. TUTEN.

ANECDOTES OF SHAFTER

How a Joke Was Played on the Santiago Chieftain.

EXAMPLE OF HIS PERSEVERANCE

Tried Five Times to Kick a Football Which Finally Conquered Him. True Prediction Made By His Father When He Started For the Civil War—How He Won Nickname of "Pecos Bill."

The late Major General William Rufus Shafter, the Santiago chieftain, thoroughly enjoyed a good story and did not object to telling one even if the joke was on himself. He had a faithful servant whose name was George.

One day the general, contemplating a trip to Santa Barbara, Cal., sent George to the ticket office to buy a sleeping berth. To make sure that the old man would make no mistake the general called after him in an emphatic manner:

"George, tell them I want a section and a lower."

An hour later George returned, and the general asked:

"Did you get it?"

"Yes, sir," answered George.

"What did you get?" asked Shafter.

"A section and a little over."

"Great Lord, George!" exclaimed the general. "You don't mean to tell me that you went down to that ticket office and asked for a section and a little over, do you?"

"Yes, sir," said George.

"A section and a little over?" repeated the general. "Hang it, George, you don't think I'm that big, do you? I know I am a big man, but heretofore I've always found one section in a sleeping car roomy enough to stow away in."

General Shafter, who was tall and slender in youth, gained much flesh while living in the far west, and before the Spanish-American war he weighed over 300 pounds. The story is told of him that one day when he was on the Pacific coast he was sitting in his parlor, overlooking the parade ground. Some soldiers were playing football on the campus. One of them, a muscular man, sent the football flying through the parlor window. The soldiers were frightened, and visions of the guardhouse loomed before them. The general presently appeared at his door with the football under his arm. Tossing it into the air, he made a desperate kick at the sphere. The ball dropped harmless at his feet and the general's body spun around twice. He tried it again, and again missed. Five times he kicked and missed, and in the fifth experiment he lost his balance and tumbled head over heels down the steps to the ground. The soldiers quickly went to his assistance. The general was not hurt, but the football conquered him and he surrendered.

Captain George H. Henderson of Lapeer, who served in the civil war with General Shafter, at that time a lieutenant of a company of the Seventh Michigan volunteer infantry, when asked if he knew General Shafter replied:

"Know him! Of course I did. He was a lieutenant in the Seventh the same time I was, and we were chums together. He was a mighty good officer and a mighty good fellow. He once told me a funny story about his father. Bill worked with his father on the farm in Kalamazoo county, and I guess the old man did not exactly like to have him go to the war. The citizens turned out to see the boys take the train at Galesburg, and Mr. Shafter was among them. 'Goodby, Bill,' said he as the train was starting. 'I expect to hear soon that you got shot in the seat of your trousers.'

"Well, pretty soon Bill got to be adjutant, and in one of the first fights he was wheeling his horse around and a rifle ball just grazed his saddle and went into his flesh. Oh, he swore like a pirate. You could have heard him half a mile off. Then, after he got cooled down a little, he said to some of those near him, 'What will my father say now?'

"I'll tell you how I came to receive that designation," said General Shafter to a group of friends one night after having been addressed as "Pecos Bill." "It was out in that arid part of the west" where water is a real luxury. We had been traveling for several days without water, and finally a captain of one of our companies, with tears in his eyes, said:

"'Colonel, we are lost,' and begged that we turn back. We'll go straight ahead,' I replied. 'The Pecos river lies over there somewhere, and I intend going on until we meet it if we have to circumnavigate the globe to do it.'

"We reached the river that night. The water was muddy, but it was water. We simply had to go ahead. If we had turned back, we'd have starved to death."

Mrs. Mary McKittrick, General Shafter's only daughter, passionately loved her father. On his return from Santiago she traveled over half of the continent to meet and welcome him. A concourse of people had assembled to witness the affecting meeting between the conquering hero and his daughter after those long history making months of separation. And what were her first touching words of greeting? She gave a little start at sight of the general's form, by no means attenuated, but less some sixty pounds, lost in Cuba, and said:

"Oh, you're just as thin as a rail!"

The tension was relaxed, and the crowd smiled.

LEMON FOR GRAFTERS.

Government Fruit Experts Expected an Orange From Grafting Tests.

Secretary of Agriculture Wilson has been handed the lemon, according to a special dispatch from Washington to the Philadelphia Press. It came from his own experimental nursery. Much to the surprise of officials of his department they have on their hands a tree filled with lemons when they were expecting oranges.

Several months ago Professor B. G. Galloway, chief of the bureau of the plant industry, and Herbert W. Webber, his assistant, began experiments in grafting a Florida orange upon a Japanese orange tree known as La Foliata. Their object was to get an orange tree that would grow in a climate cooler than that of Florida and southern California. The Japanese La Foliata is hardy and produces oranges in cool climates, and it was believed a hybrid might be produced that would be just the thing to introduce orange growing in states farther north than Florida.

Instead of oranges the hybrid has produced lemons, a fruit almost equally valuable and one of which California, according to statistics, has produced more than 90 per cent in the United States. When the fruit was ready to pick the other day several of the supposed oranges were taken off the tree and peeled. It was found that they were thin skinned, and they gave every appearance of an orange until one of the assistants—just one—the puckering of whose lips told the tale plainer than his words, exclaimed: "It isn't an orange at all! The blamed tree has handed us a lemon!"

Professor Galloway was much interested. He, too, tasted of the fruit and found it was as sour as a lime. He hurried to Secretary Wilson at the discovery and made him a glass of lemonade.

The fruit looks like an orange in shape and color, and only in its sourness is it different from the sweeter product. This tree, it is believed, will grow lemons as far north as Tennessee. North and South Carolina, Arkansas and other states in the same latitude. The tree resists a temperature of 15 degrees above zero, in such a test only a few buds on the topmost limbs being affected.

The department scientists are puzzled and are investigating the cause. The Japanese orange is not as sweet as the Florida or California orange, but no person around the department expected such a result.

NATION OF REDS.

We Are Becoming So Because of Our Habits, Says Ohio Man.

D. S. Marvin, aged eighty-one years and a student of nature, of local celebrity in Shelby, O., says, according to the Cincinnati Enquirer: "I sit in my room, which fronts upon the street, observing the persons who pass by and speculate upon their appearauce. I note that about 75 per cent of those who pass along are no longer white men. They are red men. Why is it that in Europe we find white men, in Asia yellow men and in Africa black men? The cause of these differences is mainly owing to the climate in which they live. But deeper and beyond this there are other causes, such as the mode of life, the conditions which prevail between civilization and savage life, but perhaps more than all is a malicious climate.

"In America we have red men, and the influences that have given color to the natives of America are now acting upon and causing the white men of this country to become red men. Our children are born red; our old men become red from exposure to the sun. Our native Indians have become red men because they led an outdoor life. It may take many generations to bring this about to its full limit, but it is bound to come. The sun is the primary cause of all color in the world."

The Regular Custom.

In a London street a girl of twelve and a boy of ten were playing a family drama of "mother and father," and Bobby was being instructed in his role. "Now, Bob," said the girl, "you jest walk up ter ther corner an' wait there till we tells yer ter come. We're a-goin' ter git dinner ready, an' when we calls yer, yer ter come 'ome and chuck the fings about." "Ho!" said Bobby. "Come 'ome drunk, do I? And why for?" "Why for, stoopid?" retorted the girl, with a glance of mingled scorn and pity. "Ain't it Saturday?"

PLAN TO PREVENT RAILROAD REBATING

Judge Gaynor Wants U. S. to Appoint Freight Agents.

MAY HAVE TO DO SO, HE SAYS

Such Officials Not to Fix Rates, Suggests New York Justice, but to See That All Pay Prescribed Rate, No More and No Less—Declares Favoritism In Freight Rates Greatest Crime of Our Day and Generation.

Justice William J. Gaynor of the New York supreme court in a speech at the Economic club dinner in Boston the other night made a novel suggestion for the prevention of railroad rebating, says the New York American.

Judge Gaynor's remarks were received with grave attention.

"It is my belief," he said, "that the government should appoint the general freight agent of every railroad, and it may have to do so, for he, through his subordinates, could stop the abuse at once.

"Some one will say, 'Yes, but he could be bribed.' Yes, of course, for that is always possible. But let us remember that it is not the rule, but the exception, for high officials appointed by the president of the United States or government to accept bribes.

"As Hamilton said, contrive as you may, in the last analysis you have to repose power in some one, and I would rather see the power in this instance in the hands of a responsible and answerable government official than in the hands of individuals seeking their own aggrandizement.

"I am not suggesting that the government through such freight agents fix the rates. I would leave that as it is. The duty of such officials would not be to fix rates, but to see that every one paid the prescribed rate, no more and no less."

At the outset of his remarks Justice Gaynor pointed to "the degradation of the national house of representatives from a deliberative body to a mere puppet of its speaker and his committee on rules."

"Think of the great railroad legislation of last session being passed upon a discussion limited to a few hours in the house of representatives," he said. "A discussion of six months would not have been too long to work out to the last analysis so great a subject, and the last analysis is what legislation should always be."

Judge Gaynor then said in part:

"Let no one be under the delusion that there is any prejudice or hostility to honestly acquired wealth, however great, in this country.

"It used to be a saying that you could hire half the people to shoot down the other half; but, while that is no longer true, owing to the education of the many and the consequent shifting of the center of thought from the few to the many, we must still consider the immense power of combined wealth, especially for evil.

"Gladstone thrilled the people of Great Britain in his last successful campaign by saying, 'Let us put our trust not in titles nor in squires nor in peers nor in acres, but in the honesty and intelligence of the nation.' The same sentiment should throb as a live coal in the minds of our public men.

"There is no danger of the confiscation of private property in this country any more than in England. But the acquisition of private property by the dishonest use of public franchises and the aid of cunning statutes is a very different thing. It is more than a menace to our republican institutions; it is fraught with their destruction if suffered to continue. The moral odium of it would in the end debase us all, and no base people can in the nature of things remain a free, self governing people.

"It has been difficult to get some people to understand that our railroads are not private roads, but our public highways, just as much so as our roads which run alongside of them.

"Mr. Bryan recently suggested that the government should take over the railroads and run them. He based this on the assertion that a railroad is a monopoly and that there should be no private monopolies. His conclusion is sound, but I do not see that his premise is, although there is nothing novel or startling in his suggestion of government ownership and operation when three-fifths of the railroads of the world are owned and operated by government.

"Any favoritism in railroad rates is absolutely unlawful and always was.

"The only new laws we needed on that head was to enable us to put in prison railroad officials who should be found guilty of such favoritism.

"Inasmuch as we now have such laws the prosecution of the corporation itself, a mere name which has no physical body to be put in prison instead of the guilty officials, is not having a good effect on the public mind, to say the least.

"It is the guilty railroad official, however high and even though he may have arisen to a high place in the councils or government of the nation or if he be only the local station agent in a village or the loneliest place, who should be prosecuted.

"This favoritism in freight rates is the greatest crime of our day and generation.

"To allow one man or set of men to have their freight carried over the public highways at a rate so much lower than that which their rivals in business are charged as to enable them to undersell such rivals and even drive them out of business is so heartless and so damnable that we shall be looked back upon by our descendants and by the future historian as a generation lost to moral sense for having suffered such a condition to exist so long.

"Just think of the public highways of a nation, open by law for all on equal terms, being used by the persons in control of them for such a purpose! It is shocking!

"It has done more wrong and worked more evil than all of the ordinary crimes for which we imprison men every day. It has caused a deep seated conviction in the community that we do not convict our big criminals here as they do in England.

"A trust is a partnership or combination of competing corporations. By such partnership or combination competition is destroyed. This is the meaning of the word in the public mind as applied to aggregations of commercial capital. Such combinations were at first made by means of trustees, and that is how they came to be called trusts."

Judge Gaynor told how after the Standard Oil and sugar trusts had been dissolved by suits in New York and Ohio "some master mind, lawyer or layman conceived the notion of a corporation being formed with power to acquire and hold the share certificates of other corporations, of any number of other corporations without limit," and concluded:

"If there be blame, we are ourselves to blame, for we elected representatives to our legislatures to pass these statutes. And the incredible thing is that all the while both the voters and their legislative representatives were crying out loudly against the trusts. Was such a spectacle ever before seen in the world?

"Buckle points out that the commercial reforms of the first half of the nineteenth century in Europe consisted in repealing the laws which had been passed to regulate and aid commerce and which were all sources of mischief instead of good. Is this history to repeat itself with us in the twentieth century?"

MUTUAL SPANKING BEE.

Girls and Boys Spanked In Turn at Football Celebration.

The wildest, noisiest celebration of a football game ever seen in Chicago shook the downtown hotels the other day, says a Chicago dispatch.

Twenty Minnesota rooters took possession of the Great Northern lobby, dining rooms and corridors. They marched upstairs and down, singing and shouting. Encountering another party of boys and girls from Minnesota, the leader shouted:

"Let's initiate the girls!" adding, "Girls, it has been decided that each of you be spanked."

Then he seized a stately blond, carefully but firmly placed her across his knee and gave her a rousing spanking. A second and a third met a similar fate. By this time each boy had a girl across his knees, and amid laughter, shrieks and screams, while the hotel guests looked on, the "first degree" was given.

Then the girls attacked the boys and in many instances administered a hearty return for the initiation they had themselves received.

English Regard For Teaching.

If there is one occupation which Englishmen are unanimous in condemning as degraded and degrading it is that most fascinating, most difficult, delicate and important work, the training of the mind. In what are humorously called "the higher walks" of teaching there are respectable salaries to be earned and agreeable rooms or houses for occupation. Here, purged of the dross of utility, a man may once more take rank as a gentleman, and if he becomes head of a house the supreme uselessness of his position commands universal and silent respect.—Nineteenth Century.

Thanksgiving at the Bellefonte Hospital.

The generosity of friends of the Bellefonte Hospital enabled the hospital authorities to treat everybody in the institution whose health permitted it, to a fine turkey dinner with all the desirable side dishes on Thur day.

During the day the general thanksgiving donations were received in large quantities with some cash contributions. The estimate value of groceries, provisions coal, etc donated $325. Several checks and other contributions will yet come in a full report of contributions will be published later

Notes on Fashion.

Brilliant red poppies are not considered too bright for evening wear when embroidered on a filmy fabric. The effect is very beautiful.

Malice and tulle rosettes and quillings are found on many of the light evening hats, many of them having little other trimming, except perhaps a long feather or an algrette.

A charming toque is composed entirely of La France roses, with a sweeping white bird of paradise aigrette, held by a knot of black velvet on one side and sweeping down over the hair at the back.

It is difficult to tell whether the newest theatre hats are really hats or simply glorified coiffure ornaments.

Roman ribbon belts look well with the plain white tailored blouses and suit skirts.

—The romantic drama, "The Flaming Arrow" will be the attraction at the Garman opera house, Tuesday Dec. 11th. The play is by Lincoln J. Carter and it is claimed that in it he has produced one of the truest pictures of Western Life the stage has ever seen, depicting army and frontier life in and about famous and historical old Fort Reno, the scene of so many stirring incidents in the pioneer days of the great West, when Indians and buffaloes were as plentiful as they now are scarce. The story of the love of Chief White Eagle for Mary Fremont, daughter of the Commander of the Post is founded on an actual fact. All of the other characters are drawn from living prototypes. There is a treacherous polished villain, a fun loving Irish Corporal and his sweetheart who has seen more summers than she cares to acknowledge, the Colonel's pretty daughter, the Colonel, a darky teamster continuously in some ludicrous predicament, soldiers, Indians and cattle men galore. The scenic effects are described as being especially elaborate several of them being painted from actual life. A fully capable cast will be seen in the production.

Culinary Hints.

Lattice potatoes is a pretty way to serve our favorite tuber. Just a little extra touch often redeems the monotony of familiar edibles. There is no end to the flood of ideas poured forth by contributors to all the household magazines—suggestions and descriptions of the best way to do everything—but the chief troubles are our hurried, overfull days and the lack of cooks interested in their work to make it an art.

Manipulation of stoves and preparation of root vegetables and scullery work are destructive to the hands. If, however, any woman with a house to keep will do the managing of the food supplies and have more of the sewing done, if need be, the saving will be fully as great.

It is a pity that there is not an organized body of kitchen helpers who would go on duty at appointed hours in more than one home and do the scullery work, the ash empting and floor cleaning

—Now is your chance to get your sewing Machine put in first class order, S. S. Ramsey of Tyrone, is at the Haag House. Send for him, all work warranted. 28-1wk

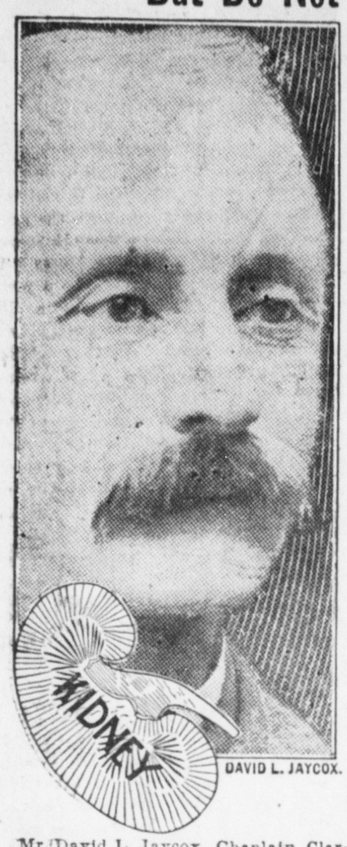
Many Persons Have Catarrh of Kidneys But Do Not Recognize It.



DAVID L. JAYCOX.

A War Veteran Spends Hundreds of Dollars in His Attempt to Cure Kidney Trouble. He Took Pe-ru-na Upon a Friend's Advice and It Proved the Best Medicine He Ever Used.

CATARRH of the kidneys is a very much neglected disease.

It is not until the disease has a firm hold upon the kidneys that the patient begins to realize that there is some derangement of these organs.

The slight backaches, the feelings of lassitude, and other warning symptoms of kidney disease are overlooked.

They are not serious enough to detain the patient from his regular work.

Even when he discovers that the kidneys are affected, he does not recognize the difficulty as being caused by catarrh.

Catarrh is sometimes so very gradual in its approach and its earlier symptoms cause such slight discomfort that it is not noticed.

However, when it is once firmly seated in the kidneys, it becomes a difficult disease to exterminate.

Indeed, catarrh of the kidneys is more serious than catarrh affecting some of the other organs of the body.

In the kidneys, it is liable to terminate in Bright's Disease or diabetes, both of which are recognized as very serious ailments, if not fatal.

The thing to be done, when catarrh of the kidneys is discovered, is to take some internal, systemic catarrh remedy, one that reaches the very source of the catarrh and removes the cause of the difficulty.

Such a remedy has been found in Peruna. It reaches catarrh, no matter where it may be located in the body—whether in the more exposed membranes of the nose and throat, or whether in the remotest part of the kidneys.

PE-RU-NA FOR KIDNEY DISEASE.

That Peruna is at once the safest and most reliable remedy for catarrh of the kidneys is proven by the many testimonials written by those who have experienced its benefits.

The testimonial given here is only a specimen of the many testimonials on our records, pertaining to the relief afforded by Peruna in severe cases of kidney trouble.

For free medical advice, address Dr. S. B. Hartman, President of the Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

Mr. David L. Jaycox, Chaplain Clarinda I. O. G. T. and Chaplain G. A. R., 865 Broadway, Oakland, Cal., writes:

"I am an old war veteran. I contracted severe bladder and kidney trouble.

"I spent hundreds of dollars and consulted a host of doctors, but neither did me any good.

"Finally some of my comrades who had been cured by Peruna advised me to try it.

"I at once bought a bottle and found it helped me so much that I kept using it for nearly four months.

"Peruna has proven the best medicine I ever used. My pains are gone and I believe myself to be cured.

"I feel well and would not be without a bottle in time of need for ten times its cost."

PITTSBURG'S IMMENSE WEALTH.

Latest Banking Report Shows Over a Half Billion Dollars in Her Banks.

Pittsburg, Pa., Dec. 1.—The last call for statements from the banks and trust companies of this city has revealed startling figures. The statements show that the combined capital surplus and deposits of the banks and trust companies here amount to $527,319,375.00 of just $2,214,453 less than the entire amount of currency and gold notes in circulation in the United States.

This gives the per capital wealth of Pittsburg $1,170—A showing that few cities in the country can equal. The increase in manufacturing during the past ten years has brought about the change and each year finds the per capital wealth increasing.

During the past ten years the wealth here has become more scattered than in former years. This is due perhaps more to the fact that many individuals have invested in real estate and the demand brought about increased prices and handsome profits. Roughly estimated small investors in real estate here have made over $10,000,000 during the past five years.

The building report for the past ten months show that $15,099,325 have been invested in buildings and the bulk of this has gone into residences the demand for houses never being it would seem supplied. The growing city is expanded in all directions and additional workmen coming in daily must find homes.

An interesting folder telling many facts about Pittsburg's greatest money making realty and how a free trip to Pittsburg can be had will be sent free to all who address G. M. Cypher & Company, 506 Locust Street, McKeesport, Pa,

The popular view of the relation of the blood to human character and conduct is marked in many a familiar expression, we speak of there being "bad blood,. between people at enmity, of "blue blood" as indicating ancestry' of "black blood" as describing a treacherous nature' and in many another phrase mark our belief that in the mental moral and physical man' "the blood is the life" The one asis of a healthful' happy and useful life is pure blood. WHAT AILS BOSTON?

Mayor Fitzgerald Declares the Hub Is Cold and Proud.

ARRAIGNS HER BUSINESS SPIRIT

He Points Out Boston's Mistake In Keeping Her Adopted Sons From Becoming Heads of Firms—Is Deaf to the Throbbing Heart of Youth at Her Doors—Let Us Boast of Our Commercial Supremacy, He Says, Rather Than of Our Culture.

"What is the matter with Boston?"

I asked this question of Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, and, though his outer and inner offices were crowded with visitors and business men, he let them wait, says Sibyl Wilbur in the Boston Herald. The idea that there may be something wrong with Boston hit her enthusiastic mayor over the heart.

"Give me a moment to think," said the mayor. "Don't make one note of what I say. Let me be very careful how I say this, for as sure as you live there is something the matter. What are you here for asking me that question? Why do I pay heed to it? Because we know what is being said of Boston. We know that somebody somewhere coined the phrase 'the decadence of Boston,' because we know that H. G. Wells of England, in a masterly article, has written of our 'enchanting and ineffectual spirit.' The decadence of Boston—is there any truth in such a phrase?

"What is the matter with Boston? It is cold and proud, and it wraps the mantle of puritanism around it. It is deaf to the throbbing heart of youth at its door. But it has got to open to us; it has got to let us in. I have said it to the Merchants' association of this city; I am ready to say it again. You have got to permit the young men of Irish, Italian, Jewish and French blood to get into business in Boston."

"Has Boston refused to do this?"

"Well, look around you. Look at the names over the business houses. What do you see? You see the names of old New England families everywhere. Tight fisted, tenacious, these old families hang on with a grip like death. They squeeze out and freeze out the ardent young soul of the Irishman. They present a cold front to the business enthusiasm of the Jew. Young men from the provinces if they have an English name are more to their liking than young men born in Boston of foreign extraction, although these young men born in Boston love Boston and are ready to think and work and plan for the future of Boston.

"Boston is the only place in the country, the only place in the world, if you please, where the Jew has not had the fullest opportunity for the exercise of his great natural talents. The atmosphere is too cold, too hard. And if the Jew, who has been taught the value of the dollar from his cradle, whose traditions for ages have developed in him a sound sense of material values, the Jew will bear everything, endure everything, for the sake of that goal of a larger freedom which comes with ultimate success—if the Jew has found this condition in Boston, what in heaven's name can the Irishman do?"

"Where do you find a basis for such an arraignment of the business spirit of Boston?" I asked the mayor.

"I find it in an analysis of the membership of her business clubs and associations. Take the membership of the Chamber of Commerce, the most powerful organization for business in the city. That organization has 1,000 members. Analyze it for yourself. I have no exact data, but I know that it is overwhelmingly Yankee. You will find a dozen, maybe twenty, Irish names on its membership. You will find two Jews. What do you think of that for a great American business center?

"I'm perfectly well aware of the argument for this state of things. We won't let in the Jew; he will crowd out the Americans; he will absorb into his own hands certain lines of business. Well, isn't the American Jew a good American? Isn't he as good a citizen as any other citizen? Isn't this America made up of a blend of foreign elements?

"And then when you have kept him out what happens? Look at what we have lost to New York—the clothing and cloak industries. Is that good for Boston? Is it good to let manufacturing and mercantile possibilities, the golden possibilities of the hour, slip out of her hands? Shall we be content to let these things go while we hug ourselves in our exclusive Yankee Americanism?

"Now, take the Irishman. He comes to this country without business training. Because of the hard conditions in Ireland for generations his business perceptions have become dulled. He is emotional, full of sentiment, affection and, in this new world, enthusiasm. He is too often a spendthrift because he likes to live well and take part in everything that is going. He makes splendid material for business development. He is electrical; he would quicken the vital forces of any business house he got into. But is he allowed a chance?"

"But there are Irishmen in business houses throughout Boston, are there not, Mr. Mayor?"

"They are in the business, but not of it," said the mayor. "The brains of Irishmen are useful to these old business concerns, and they use them. Irishmen are superintendents, managers, but they don't get into the firms. They don't have the chance to exert the genius which is theirs. Boston, probably the largest Irish community in America, keeps the Irishman's name in the background. The names of the big firms doing business here date back to the Mayflower. They are Puritan, they are Yankee, and that is because of the conservative, proud, cold spirit of old Boston."

"Well, Mr. Mayor, hasn't this spirit of old Boston made good?"

"It surely has up to a certain point, but the young soul of this city will not permit the arresting of its spiritual and mental development while old Boston sits at the tomb of its ancestors and fingers the leaves of the laurels it has won. They say Boston has a right to be conservative; that it was a significant and important city before Chicago was thought of. Well, what of it? Are we going to stand still and let Chicago and New York sap us of our energy?"

"How does New York sap Boston?"

"How does she do it? She comes in here like a giant and takes things out of our hands. She is no younger, but she is refreshed and renewed and invigorated by her young blood of foreign extraction. Within the past few years the New York Central has absorbed the Boston and Albany road, and then we have the New York, New Haven and Hartford road. Go down there to the South station, the largest terminal in this country, and you will not find a car running out of it with the name of Boston on it. Is that a sentimental argument? Well, the Irish in me makes me just that sentimental.

"The young Irishman, young Jew, young Italian, born in Boston, all love Boston as dearly as the descendants of the American Revolution. We are her spiritual sons, filled with her traditions, but, unlike the sons and daughters of the colonial days, we are not willing that Boston should become a safety deposit vault and a summer resort, a place to show monuments of past greatness.

"It is true that Boston is the most cultured center in America, and we are proud of her in that sense. We want Boston to be known for her commercial supremacy as well as her culture.

"Now, look at it a minute. Shall Boston offer culture in the classics alone to her youth, or shall she offer a sound commercial training and, what is more, the opportunity to exercise this commercial sense awakened and trained here? The young man with this need is the young man of eighteen or twenty. He has got to be quickened, made into a business man. And that is why I have been so interested in the establishment of the high school of commerce in this city.

"But it is not this young man alone whose welfare must be upon our conscience. There is another young man in Boston, the young man of thirty. He has got beyond the stage where he needs quickening. He is alive, alert, an engine of energy. He has saved perhaps his first $1,000, and he wants to invest it. Does Boston want him to take his $1,000 to Chicago, to New York, to St. Louis, to Denver?

"These are the young men who have got to get into business in Boston. They have got to be met with an interested attention; their schemes and ambitions must be heard; they must be guided, trained, encouraged and cooperated with."

"Is there not a gradual assimilation of these young men constantly going on, Mr. Mayor?"

"Doubtless there is in many business concerns," admitted Mr. Fitzgerald, "but we want a concerted effort to this end. We want a deliberately planned method of ensnaring our youth, so to speak, that they may not get away from us and leave us to our old self satisfaction. Let the turbulence of their young ideas in. Their very rashness, tempered by the conservatism of which Boston is so proud, will make for health, vigor and commercial enterprise."

"And how would you spread this net of affectionate interest for the young business soul of Boston, Mr. Mayor?"

"Well, for one thing," said the mayor, "I would have a young men's business exchange. An organization of this kind would be a splendid supplement for the high school of commerce. Such an exchange would enable the young men to get together. They would inspire each other with their ideas, and they would think up a thousand ways to make Boston bigger and better. Let the young men come into representative clubs, clubs that are designed to get business men of all nationalities and trades together, to touch elbows and exchange ideas. We want young blood in such organizations. We don't want them to become merely a dining place, but the places for origination of new and vigorous enterprises."

"No," said the mayor, rising from his chair, "let us boast of our commercial supremacy rather than our culture. Let us stop saying this is the most American city in America and learn to regard it as the most youthful and cosmopolitan city. Let us embrace our young men and be quickened by their spirit. And, above all, let us be what we should be, the metropolis of New England in very truth."

The Red Man's Signature.

Indian chiefs treating with the government now have to append their thumb prints to the documents instead of cross marks, as hitherto, says the Chicago Journal. The reason is that chiefs have frequently repudiated the cross marks and the obligations involved. The first document was recently signed by thumb prints. It was a treaty between the government and the Umatilla Indians of Washington to allow cattle to cross the Indian reservation unharmed.

LEMON FOR GRAFTERS.

Government Fruit Experts Expected an Orange From Grafting Tests.

Secretary of Agriculture Wilson has been handed the lemon, according to a special dispatch from Washington to the Philadelphia Press. It came from his own experimental nursery. Much to the surprise of officials of his department they have on their hands a tree filled with lemons when they were expecting oranges.

Several months ago Professor B. G. Galloway, chief of the bureau of the plant industry, and Herbert W. Webber, his assistant, began experiments in grafting a Florida orange upon a Japanese orange tree known as La Foliata. Their object was to get an orange tree that would grow in a climate cooler than that of Florida and southern California. The Japanese La Foliata is hardy and produces oranges in cool climates, and it was believed a hybrid might be produced that would be just the thing to introduce orange growing in states farther north than Florida.

Instead of oranges the hybrid has produced lemons, a fruit almost equally valuable and one of which California, according to statistics, has produced more than 90 per cent in the United States. When the fruit was ready to pick the other day several of the supposed oranges were taken off the tree and peeled. It was found that they were thin skinned, and they gave every appearance of an orange until one of the assistants—just one—the puckering of whose lips told the tale plainer than his words, exclaimed: "It isn't an orange at all! The blamed tree has handed us a lemon!"

Professor Galloway was much interested. He, too, tasted of the fruit and found it was as sour as a lime. He hurried to Secretary Wilson at the discovery and made him a glass of lemonade.

The fruit looks like an orange in shape and color, and only in its sourness is it different from the sweeter product. This tree, it is believed, will grow lemons as far north as Tennessee. North and South Carolina, Arkansas and other states in the same latitude. The tree resists a temperature of 15 degrees above zero, in such a test only a few buds on the topmost limbs being affected.

The department scientists are puzzled and are investigating the cause. The Japanese orange is not as sweet as the Florida or California orange, but no person around the department expected such a result.

NATION OF REDS.

We Are Becoming So Because of Our Habits, Says Ohio Man.

D. S. Marvin, aged eighty-one years and a student of nature, of local celebrity in Shelby, O., says, according to the Cincinnati Enquirer: "I sit in my room, which fronts upon the street, observing the persons who pass by and speculate upon their appearance. I note that about 75 per cent of those who pass along are no longer white men. They are red men. Why is it that in Europe we find white men, in Asia yellow men and in Africa black men? The cause of these differences is mainly owing to the climate in which they live. But deeper and beyond this there are other causes, such as the mode of life, the conditions which prevail between civilization and savage life, but perhaps more than all is a malicious climate.

"In America we have red men, and the influences that have given color to the natives of America are now acting upon and causing the white men of this country to become red men. Our children are born red; our old men become red from exposure to the sun. Our native Indians have become red men because they led an outdoor life. It may take many generations to bring this about to its full limit, but it is bound to come. The sun is the primary cause of all color in the world."

English Regard For Teaching.

If there is one occupation which Englishmen are unanimous in condemning as degraded and degrading it is that most fascinating, most difficult, delicate and important work, the training of the mind. In what are humorously called "the higher walks" of teaching there are respectable salaries to be earned and agreeable rooms or houses for occupation. Here, purged of the dross of utility, a man may once more take rank as a gentleman, and if he becomes head of a house the supreme uselessness of his position commands universal and silent respect.—Nineteenth Century

MUTUAL SPANKING BEE.

Girls and Boys Spanked In Turn at Football Celebration.

The wildest, noisiest celebration of a football game ever seen in Chicago shok the downtown hotels the other day, says a Chicago dispatch.

Twenty Minnesota rooters took possession of the Great Northern lobby, dining rooms and corridors. They marched upstairs and down, singing and shouting. Encountering another party of boys and girls from Minnesota, the leader shouted:

"Let's initiate the girls!" adding, "Girls, it has been decided that each of you be spanked."

Then he seized a stately blond, carefully but firmly placed her across his knee and gave her a rousing spanking. A second and a third met a similar fate. By this time each boy had a girl across his knees, and amid laughter, shrieks and screams, while the hotel guests looked on, the "first degree" was given.

Then the girls attacked the boys and in many instances administered a hearty return for the initiation they had themselves received.

HARRIMAN'S NEW RAILROAD.

Kentucky Darky's View of Illinois Central In Its Early History.

The Illinois Central railroad, which recently passed under the control of Edward H. Harriman, the American railway king, runs through a large district of southern Illinois familiarly called "Egypt" out of deference to its largest town, Cairo, says the New York Times. When the first tracks of the railroad were being laid through Egypt the division superintendent of construction went one day for a drink of water to a well beside the cabin of an old Kentucky darky who had found freedom and philosophy on the north side of the Ohio river. The old man was smoking his corncob pipe in the shade of his sycamore tree.

"Well, Uncle Sambo," said the railroad builder as he hung up the gourd on the well sweep again, "don't you do any work at all?"

"Me? Yass, sahr. I work six months every winter on a flatboat on dat river yonder."

"Well, I suppose when we get the railroad through you will want to come in with us and get a job on a flat car."

"What for?"

"To work, of course."

"No, sahr. Ain't nevah goin' to be 'nough work on your railroad to keep no man busy six months in the yeah. Can't you see dat river yonder, flowin', flowin'?"

"Yes. What of it?"

"Well, sahr, de Lord he made dat river to float things down on, and der ain't no use buildin' a railroad to enter into compatition with de Almighty."

Identifying a Revolutionary Hero.

The last of the unidentified portraits of Revolutionary heroes which hang in Independence hall in Philadelphia was a few days ago, after nearly six years of anxious work, proved to be that of a South Carolina captain by the name of William Smith, says the Philadelphia Record. Smith's chief claim to distinction lies in the fact that, although but eighteen years of age at the outbreak of the Revolution, he promptly organized a company and joined with a body of Georgian troops in making a successful attack against the British garrison at Fort Anderson. The picture was one of many painted by James Sharpless, the English portrait painter, during his visit to Philadelphia about 1794. The youthful appearance of the subject was the most puzzling feature, as it was supposed that all the sitters to this artist were old men. The identification was finally accomplished through an engraving made of Captain Smith about 1810 by Savage. Once the name had been secured it was comparatively easy to trace the career of the distinguished southerner, and the years of search have at last been fully rewarded. The portrait will be properly tagged.

Pearl In a Pig's Mouth.

Cutting open the head of a dressed pig the other afternoon, Patrick Mullen of Isabelle avenue and Evergreen street, Bayonne, N. J., found a large pearl, says the New York Times. The gem was just back of the pig's snout. Although the enterprising Mullen has received an offer of $100 for the stone by Charles Becker, by whom he is employed, he refused the offer.

National Apple Day.

At the Jamestown exposition, to be held next year, there will be a special day set aside to be known as apple day, says the American Fruit and Nut Journal. The national fruit will have a big showing made in its behalf, commensurate with its deserts as the most popular fruit known. The department of congresses and special events has set aside Tuesday, Oct. 15, as national apple day.

WORLD'S HORSE SHOW

International Society to Hold Annual Meets In London.

FIRST EXHIBIT SET FOR NEXT JUNE

Announcement Made at National Horse Exhibit In New York Shows That Most of Prominent American Exhibitors Will Back the Project by Personal Entries and Influence. Management to Be Anglo-American.

An international horse show to be held at London next June is an assured fact. A meeting of the prominent American exhibitors and representatives of the National Horse Show association and of the Hackney Horse association of England was recently held in Madison Square Garden in New York, when the plans for the exhibition were decided upon, says the New York Times. The show will be an annual one and held in London each year. The inaugural event is set for June 7 to 13, 1907, and will be held at the great Olympia of London. The prizes will aggregate about $35,000, and the entries will close next May. Not only will the American exhibits meet the best horses in England, but entrants will be solicited in France, Belgium, Germany, Holland, Spain and Italy. Each of these countries will be represented on the board of directors.

The meeting was held at the instance of Frank F. Euren, secretary of the English Hackney Horse association, who came to New York to complete the details of the exhibition. He represented the English directors and explained the object of the new association, outlining its plan and scope. Among those who attended were Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, Reginald C. Vanderbilt, George Pepper, John L. Conaway, James T. Hyde, William T. Dulles and R. Penn Smith of Philadelphia, Alfred Godfrey and Adam Beck, M. P., of Canada, who occupied the chair.

Frank F. Euren, on behalf of the English directors, explained that he was sent over for the purpose of interesting the American exhibitors in an international show, to be held annually in London, and said that it was the intention to hold the exhibition in the Olympia building, a structure twice the size of Madison Square Garden, with a show ring 305 by 76 feet. Besides the offer of $35,000 in prizes a number of championship cups were planned to become the absolute property of the winners and to be renewed each year. The object of the show was to promote the best interests of horse breeding and to endeavor to entrench its position in social favor.

He said the directors in England were thoroughly representative horsemen and enthusiastic sportsmen and that they proposed to secure judges selected by mutual agreement. It was intended to provide stabling accommodation for more than a thousand horses and to hold auction sales at the end of every show.

Not only would the American exhibitors who sent strings over to compete have an opportunity to contest in the international show, but by arrangement with the management of prominent English and foreign fixtures they could also show in various other English events were they so minded.

The most prominent exhibitors of America were in attendance, and each one pledged his individual support to the project and agreed to foster it with personal entry and individual influence. Alfred Vanderbilt created great enthusiasm by being the first to declare that he would not only attend the exhibition, but would take over his entire stable. Reginald Vanderbilt then announced that he would do the same thing, and the following pledged themselves to send a more or less extensive representation: John Gerken, R. P. McGrann, Clarence Moore, Alfred B. Maclay, Dr. Andrew Smith, E. T. Stotesbury, Edward C. Knierlem, George Pepper and George Hulme. A number of others, including William H. Moore and Clarence H. Mackay, who were not present, are expected to take stables over.

Chairman Beck then said that he would pledge government assistance abroad and assure every exhibitor of absolutely fair treatment in the judging. He said he had taken up the matter with the Canadian minister of agriculture, who had assured him of government recognition. He said that he hoped President Roosevelt might be interested in the project and give it his countenance.

A committee was appointed consisting of Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, John Gerken and James T. Hyde to select an American committee of eight members to make all arrangements for the show and for the transportation of horses. Mr. Hyde announced that he had received assurances from American exhibitors that insured the sending of at least a hundred entries from America to the London show and that the cost would not exceed $50 a head for the trip.

It is intended to incorporate the association under the title of the International Horse Show association, with a capital of $100,000, of which $25,000 has already been subscribed by the English directors and their friends.

The management will be vested in England and America jointly. James T. Hyde, assistant secretary of the National Horse show, will be the manager for America and Canada, and Frank F. Euren will be the resident manager in London. A continental committee has already been named. To insure perfect fairness in all classes there will be one American, one English and one continental judge.

HIS MILLIONS FOR THE POOR

Alvarado Says Libraries and Universities Do Not Feed the Hungry.

Pedro Alvarado, owner of the Palmillo mine at Parral, Chihuahua, Mexico, whose wealth is estimated at more than $150,000,000, announces that he will distribute $10,000,000 or more to the poor of Mexico within a short time. This young man, who six years ago was a poor miner, offered to pay the government debt of Mexico some time ago, but the offer was declined, says a Galveston (Tex.) special dispatch to the New York World. He is going to see President Diaz and renew the offer.

He says he got his vast wealth from the earth which is a part of Mexico, and he proposes that his poor countrymen shall share his good fortune. His plan is not to give cash, but to provide homes and land for the poor and equip them so they can earn their living at trades or on plantations. He promises to make 10,000 Mexicans independent, to educate as many poor children and to give away a few millions every year. Already for several years he has been a liberal giver to the poor and has built churches and schoolhouses.

"To erect monuments, establish libraries and endow great universities is to but help the rich and their children," he thinks, "but it neither feeds the body, clothes the naked nor saves the souls of the deserving poor. I propose to give away much of my wealth before I die, for none of it I can take with me, and only a fool would horde wealth while half the world starves."

Costly Christmas Novelties.

One of the latest novelties in the way of Christmas gifts made of silver is a little six inch reproduction of a motor boat with a well in the center, a steering wheel and the regulation torpedo boat stern, writes a New York correspondent of the Pittsburg Dispatch. These miniature craft are made in two styles, one to appeal to men and the other to women. The first style converts the miniature craft into a receptacle for cigarettes, the well furnishing the place for the short smokes to lie, while up in the bow of the craft is a place for matches nestling under a hatch that lifts up in the most seamanlike way, another hatch in the stern affording a place for ashes. The "feminine" boats are fitted up as jewel cases, the well of the craft being lined with plush, covering both the tiny seats and the "floor boards." They are rather costly trifles, since they are priced at $20.

NATURE'S RETREAT FOR THE WILD

The Preserve Near Canyon City Would Be About Fifty Miles Long by From Five to Ten Wide—Consent of State of Texas and Help From the National Government Are Needed.

Charles Goodnight, a noted cattleman of the Panhandle of Texas, proposes, if the consent of the Texas state government and financial aid of congress be given, to form an association for the establishment in Palodura canyon, near Canyon City, of a preserve for buffalo and other wild animals native to the southwest and also of a ranch for the propagation of a breed of beef animal, which he has named "catalo," the same being a cross of the buffalo and the thoroughbred domestic beef animal, says the Kansas City Star.

The canyon is a chasm through which runs Palodura creek, one of the headwaters of Red river, and is about fifty miles long by from five to ten wide. It begins with a series of precipices, by which it falls about 200 feet and thence by sharp declivities until its greatest depth is 1,200 to 1,500 feet. Through the entire distance the little stream traverses a narrow valley, and all the way on both sides the walls are almost perpendicular.

The valley is fertile land and is covered with a growth of large forest trees which, wherever it is possible for them to take root, even climb the rocky bluffs. These trees are the pecan, the elm, the hackberry, the walnut, the sycamore, the cottonwood and the cedar. The cedar attains an enormous growth and is claimed by scientific men who have visited the canyon to be the same as the cedar of Lebanon of Scriptural fame. The trees of the canyon and the bases of the bluffs which confine it are covered with wild grapevine, Virginia creeper and other climbing vegetation. Beneath it all the creek meanders, sometimes flowing peacefully, but more often brawling its way over rocky precipices.

In the bluffs nature has made caves where bears, wolves, wildcat and panther live, and in crevices smaller fur animals make their homes. In the depths of the forest deer and antelope abound. In the trees song birds build their nests, and high up in crags of the bluffs eagles have their eyries. In the deeper waters of the creek game fish abound, and muskrat burrow in the yielding soil. It is nature's retreat for the wild, and to save the native wild animals from total extinction Mr. Goodnight is willing to head a movement to collect them in pairs or herds and place them in the canyon for future preservation.

If the two governments do their part Mr. Goodnight offers to give outright to the association a herd of more than 100 buffalo which he has preserved on his ranch. This is the only herd of the American bison in the southwest, where it formerly found winter pasture in herds of countless thousands, and Mr. Goodnight thinks it ought to be preserved by government here on its native health. Mr. Goodnight would corral the buffalo and the "catalo" on the prairie adjacent to the rim of the canyon. The other animals he would confine in separate corrals in the depths of the canyon.

He chooses the prairie for the buffalo and for the cross breed because the native grasses of the plains are nature's food for these animals. They will eat other food, but they prefer the native pasture, and in no other part of America are these grasses so nutritious as here upon the staked plain in the Texas Panhandle. The land is not public domain, but enough, including the canyon, may be purchased for the use Mr. Goodnight proposes. Indeed, many large holders have offered for a nominal price to convey to the proposed association lands which they own in the canyon and bordering it. The transfer must be done soon, however, for the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe by its main line and branch from Canyon City is daily carrying a greater immigration into that country.

Collecting and propagating his herd of buffalo and breeding the "catalo" have cost Mr. Goodnight much time, patience and money, and, although it has been and still is a labor of love for him, he is willing for the government to take the work over, for he now is seventy or more years old, past the age of active usefulness, and since he has nobody to hand it down to he wants to make sure that what he has so well undertaken will not be suspended or abandoned. He believes that in the "catalo" he has made a beef animal superior to any other breed and that the next generation will even improve upon it. President Roosevelt, it is said, has signified a willingness to recommend the project to congress if Texas will cede jurisdiction of the canyon.

To Please a Little Girl at Christmas.

After seeing the delight of one little girl over the toy clothespins which were given her for Christmas and the lasting pleasure which she took in playing with them I have made it a point to remember those simple toys as a gift for my little girl friends, of whom I have many, writes a lady correspondent. They come in little wooden barrels.

A Queer Marriage Custom.

Members of the M'jiji tribe, who live on the Limpopo river, wear an extraordinary "marriage dress." This weird and uncomfortable looking costume is made entirely of split reeds, fastened together with grass, and the unhappy bachelor who contemplates matrimony is compelled to wear it for three solid months before the happy event comes off, meanwhile leading a life of strict seclusion. What effect this extraordinary custom has on the popularity of marriage among the M'jijis is not known, but it was only with the utmost difficulty that some members of the mounted police, who encountered some would be Benedicts, induced them to allow their photographs to be taken. —Wide World Magazine.

The Bounding Boy.

During these raw, damp, chilly days it is interesting to observe what the Rev. Mr. Chadband described as "the happy, bounding boy," says the Chicago Chronicle. Growlups go along with heavy overcoats buttoned up and hands incased in gloves. The "bounding boy" scorns an overcoat, he wears on the back of his head a cap the size of a postage stamp, and he thrusts his hands in his pockets when he feels the necessity of warming them. His knickerbockered legs look chilly, but he declares that they are not. At any rate he manages to get along with about one-fourth the clothing of his adult relatives. That is why he is a "bounding boy."

THE FIRST AIR BRAKE.

What It Did When Westinghouse Finally Won a Trial.

Persons who should have known better thought Westinghouse visionary when they were told that he proposed to stop a train by air. Nobody seemed inclined to let him try his plan on a real train, but they did not object to his working a model of it in a shop where he couldn't do any harm or involve anybody else in expense. He knew his scheme would work, but he could not make any one else believe it. So he continued to sell his invention for replacing derailed cars on the tracks and to talk about his brake to any railroad man who was willing to listen.

"Well, have you ever stopped a train with this air thing of yours?" they would ask.

No, he couldn't say that he had done so. Nobody would let him try it even on a train of dump cars.

One day he arrived in Pittsburg, selling his other invention and talking about his brake notion to a man connected with a railroad out there. "That's a great idea of yours," said the man. "We will try it on our line."

So the officials of this railroad permitted Westinghouse to put his new "kickshaw" on one of their trains. But he had to agree to indemnify the road for any damage that might be caused to the train as the result of the trials. The train was equipped. On the designated day the confident inventor and a group of skeptical railway men boarded the train on which the first air brakes were fixed. Off went the train on its trial trip. The engineer put on full speed, and just as he had rounded a curve he saw ahead, at a grade crossing and in the middle of the track, a loaded wagon, a man and a boy and a balky horse. The engineer moved his little lever, and the first train that was ever stopped by air pulled up at a standstill several feet short of the obstruction.

Thus, on its first trial, the Westinghouse air brake saved life and prevented damage to property. Thenceforward talking was unnecessary; all that had to be done was to make brakes. The inventor thought of that clause securing compensation to the railroad for any damage he might do to the train, and he laughed. His fortune dated from that day. He was then only twenty-two.—Arthur Warren in Success.

TO HELP YOURSELF.

Cultivate These Qualities and They Will Well Repay You.

A good memory for faces and facts connected with them, thus avoiding giving offense through not recognizing or bowing to people or saying to them what had better been left unsaid.

An unaffected, sweet, distinct and sympathetic voice. The American feminine voice is a target which has been hit hard many times and very justly. Learn to be appreciative of the natural mellow tones possible to every woman and avoid the shrill voices that remind one of a large concourse of hens.

Cultivate the charm of making little sacrifices quite naturally, as if of no account to yourself.

Cultivate the habit of making allowances for the opinions and feelings of others as well as their prejudices. We can't all see things from the same angle in this world. If we did it would be a mighty dreary, monotonous old sphere.

Cultivate the art of listening without impatience to prosy talkers and of smiling at the twice or thrice told tale or incident. It really won't hurt you to hear it over again, and, then, remember that you are never so charming as when you are making other persons think they are interesting.

Christmas Gifts For Men.

"When it comes to selecting personal gifts," says Harper's Bazar, "the way is made easier for those who choose for women than for those who wish to give presents to men. For the latter may be the magazine or book rack or frame or desk set or brasses—if he has bachelor chambers or is an exceptional head of a household. As a rule, a man does not feel that a gift is a gift unless for his personal service. Every man with a particle of consideration for others should start a fad—for prints or pipes or pottery or riding crops or something else that may be contributed to indefinitely. Every woman or girl is on the alert for something new in belts. In this time of the universal shirt waist the belt must be unusual in order to lend distinction to the costume. This year patent leather belts are shown for those who wish a stiff belt, and they are to be found in a number of colors and adorned with polka dots."

Among the dead of one of the battlefields before Richmond was a young Confederate soldier who lay unburied several days after the conflict. Already the flesh had been eaten by worms from his fingers, but underneath one skeleton hand lay an open Bible, the fingers pressed upon these words of the Twenty-third Psalm: "Thy rod and thy staff they comfort me."

Cleaning Papered Walls.

Papered walls may be cleaned with a mop of cheesecloth strips an inch and a half wide and eight inches long made fast to a light handle. Brush the paper well with it twice a month.

Every spring and fall mix cornstarch, whiting and powdered fuller's earth in equal parts, dip the mop into the powder and rub walls and ceilings well with it. Then shake all powder from the mop, cover it with a damp flannel and go all over the wall again, wiping in long straight strokes. The flannel must be damp only. Wet, it is apt to leave marks. As soon as it is dirty change it for a fresh one.

HIDDEN DANGER.

Nature Gives Timely Warnings That No Bellefonte Citizen Can Afford to Ignore.

Danger signal No. 1 comes from the kidney secretions. They will warn you when the kidneys are sick. Well kidneys excrete a clear, amber fluid. Sick kidneys send out a thin, pale and foamy or a thick, red, ill-smelling urine, full of ediment and irregular of passage.

Danger Signal No. 2 comes from the back. Back pains, dull and heavy, or sharp and acute, tell you of sick kidneys and warn you of the coming of dropsy, diabetes and Bright's disease. Doan's Kidney Pills cures sick kidneys and cure them permanently. Here's Bellefonte proof.

Mrs. Nancy Davis, of 246 East Logan Street, says: "I suffered a bad fall some years ago when living in Rochester. I thought at first that I had broken my back. I was unable to get up without assistance and from that time I suffered for years with a weak back and excruciating pains through the loins and through the small of my back. Sometimes I was completely prostrated and helpless. Doctors and medicines failed to help me and the pain continued until I got Doan's Kidney Pills. I took only a few doses before I began to feel better and when I had continued using them for a while I was thoroughly cured. My back regained its strength and the pain left me. I have had no return of the trouble since."

Fire at Glen Union.

On Wednesday night the large barn of the Glen Union Lumber company at Glen Union was burned to the ground and it was only by heroic work that the office and store of that company were saved from destruction. William Schrimshaw, one of the fire fighters, was severely burned about the hands and face. It is thought that the fire was of incendiary origin. A lot of hay and some other articles were burned. One horse was cremated in the burned structure before it could be liberated

NOAH H. SWAYNE II, RESIGNS.

John Kennedy, of Punxsutawney Succeeds Him as President of Nittany Furnace.

At a meeting of the Directors of the Nittany Iron Company, held in New York on Monday last, Mr. Noah H. Swayne, 2nd, tendered his resignation as President of the Company. Mr. Swayne's resignation is due to the fact that his other interests require so much of his time that he could not continue to give this Company the attention which he felt that it should have from its president. The Board accepted Mr. Swayne's resignation and elected him Chairman of the Executive Committee and he will continue to give to the Company the benefit of his experience and knowledge of conditions here.

Mr. John Kennedy, General Manager of the Punxsutawney Iron Company, Punxsutawney, Pa., was elected President to succeed Mr. Swayne, his election to take effect December first. Mr. Kennedy is a practical blast furnace man of large experience and with a record of unbroken success. It is not expected that Mr. Kennedy will live in Bellefonte but that he will come over frequently from Punxsuatweny and will be here much more often than Mr. Swayne has found it possible to be of late. It is not expected that there will be any further changes in the management or in the conduct of the Company's affairs.

Doings in Society.

Miss Helen E. Overton has been availing herself of the extraordinary facilities for entertainment offered by the Thomas property at the corner of Allegheny and Curtin streets which is now used by the Academy as a Fraternity house.

A few weeks ago she had a housewarming for the Fraternity boys, inviting many of the fair sex who made the evening pass very pleasantly for the young men.

Last Friday afternoon the most successful social event of the fall season took place when Miss Overton entertained her numerous lady friends at an afternoon tea. In the receiving line were Miss Overton, Mrs. Louisa V. Harris, Mrs. Evelyn Rogers, Mrs. Elizabeth Calloway, Miss Myra Humes, Miss Emma Green and Mrs. Esther Lucas, of New Jersey, a niece of the hostess.

The delicious refreshments were served with gold and white effect by the very attractive and efficient aids—Misses Thomazine Potter, Elizabeth Gephart, Margaret Thomas, Jennie Harper, Sara Potter and Ruth Kase. And the whole affair seemed to receive a peculiar inspiration from the dainty and significent decorations of the Academy colors, the gold and white, which prevailed here and there throughout the spacious parlors and corridors, and then, too, the plants and greens which were arranged with so much taste contributed in a large measure to make the event seem as it were a dream to the hundred and fifty guests that were enjoying Miss Overton's hospitality and resourcefulness in full measure. "Simply delightful in every respect," was the verdict of one and all as they reluctantly passed to their homes and the perfect informality that prevailed was largely responsible for the success attained.

As a fitting climax to her hospitality, Miss Overton on Saturday evening entertained the Faculty of the Academy and the aids who the night before had been such important factors in the success of the evening.

Doesn't Want "Drunks."

The Pennsylvania Railroad has revived an old order about hauling intoxicated persons on its passenger trains. The order was issued several years ago and was to the effect that any person found to be under the influence of liquor should not be allowed to enter a train. Whether the order had gradually been forgotten or whether some accident occurred to make its reissue necessary is not known, but it has recently been reissued. Intoxicated men are often boisterous and the railroad officers fear that not only will annoyance be caused to the conductor and trainmen by the person insisting on going from coach to coach, but that there is annoyance to other passengers and there is danger of such a man being thrown from the platform or stepping from it at a station and then attempting to board the train after it has started.

Hunting Season Ends; Unusually Good One.

The hunting season in Pennsylvania which ended Friday was an unusally good one, according to officials of the state game commission. Many hunters report they had not had such luck for years, and that they observed few violations of the game laws.

Most of these violations have been committed by foreigners, who paid no attention to the restrictions as to the number of birds and animals to be killed by one person. So far as the commission can learn, resident hunters appreciate the value of the game laws, and have striven cheerfully to comply with them.

The game for which the season closed Friday are deer, pheasant, grouse, hare or rabbits, quail or partridge, wild turkeys, woodcock, squirrel and plover.
